SYSTEM OF CUTTING TIMBER HERE HURTS TRADE WITH EUROPE

Investigation Discloses Lack of Metric Measurements Retards Sales

B.C. WILL BENEFIT BY PREMIER'S COURTESY

Dalmatian Fishery Formula Will Be Given to British Columbia

Completing a three-month tour of Europe, where he investigated conditions relative to possibilities for the development of trade from British Columbia in nine countries for the British Columbia Government, Stephen E. Raymer, of Vancouver, has returned and has already submitted a preliminary report of his investigations to Premier Tolmie, whom he met at Toronto. Charged by the Government with the particular duty of ascertaining lumber trade conditions, Mr. Raymer made extensive enquiries as to causes which have acted to the detriment of timber sales on the continent of Europe in the past. He found that one of the chief obstacles to marketing of British Columbia lumber was owing to measurements. The continent of Europe uses the metric system of measurement. British Columbia operates on the inch basis, and the lumber mills do not adhere to the standard inch, but cut scant.

"One of the objections to the development of our trade," stated Mr. Raymer, "is to be found in the fact that the carpenters and workmen of Europe have been trained to measure by the metric system. In using British Columbia timber which is not cut even to the standard inch, but cut scant."

AUGUST ANDREE FAILED
ON POLAR EXPEDITION

(Copyright 1930 and All Rights Reserved by the Associated Press in North America, South America and Japan)

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 2.—The remains of Svalofund August Andree, famous Swedish explorer, and his colleague, Nils Strindberg, tonight were resting in the little Tromsø hospital—back in civilization again after their thirty-three year sleep in the Arctic ice of White Island.

They were back again in the hospital after they fought so bravely to reach after disaster overtook the balloon in which they were trying to fly across the hitherto undiscovered North Pole, and left them to battle for life amidst the drifting, churning ice and the awful cold of the farthest North.

These Vikings of the air failed in their effort to get back home, and they are continuing the sleep which began the memory of today's youngest generation, but their spirits are alive in this tiny capital of the Arctic which knew them in the flesh.

MANY DRIVEN FROM HOMES IN FAIRBANKS BY SWOLLEN RIVER

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Sept. 2.—Flood waters, which rendered more than one hundred families temporarily homeless and caused an unestimated amount of property damage, were receding today, following the cessation of heavy rains. Although many families were forced to abandon their dwellings, there was virtually no suffering as residents of the inundated section of the town found shelter with friends or in the hotels.

Train service was resumed today and travel was again possible over the Richardson Highway.

The heat was cut off from the hospital, but this was readily remedied when the Alaska Railroad came to the rescue, running a line from the power plant to the building. Some of the hotels were without heat, due to the flooding of their basements.

Chinese in Canada Ask Concessions

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—The petition which has been submitted to the Government by the Chinese Consul-General to Canada, Hon. I. Tohyen, was discussed at an interview here today which Dr. Tohyen had with Dr. C. D. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs. Dr. Tohyen stated after the interview that he had received a very sympathetic hearing. He is managing director of the Chinese Trade Bureau, and his headquarters are in Boston.

It was urged that certain Chinese who have been resident in Canada for some years and have evidence of good character and established identity, be permitted to bring their wives and families to this country, when vouchered for by consular and representative Canadian.

Greater leniency in the regulations admitting Chinese students who wish to study in Canada is also being urged on the Government, and that Chinese citizens be allowed to visit China for five years instead of two without losing their status in Canada.

Three Killed and Two Hurt By Explosion

Sewer Gas Mysteriously Collects in Tank at Plant in Kitchener, Ont.

MAN IN HOSPITAL IN SERIOUS CONDITION

KITCHENER, Ont., Sept. 2.—Three men are dead and two others are ill in hospital, one seriously, as a result of sewer gas mysteriously collecting in one of the four sewer tanks at the Mill Street plant here today. The dead are Jack Stevens, son, Jacob Eby and Charles Zuck, all of Kitchener. Alex Mayer, Kitchener, is in the hospital in a serious condition.

The fifth man is Foreman Ephraim Ernest, who tried to effect a rescue and was driven out by the fumes. He appeared to be all right afterwards, but late in the afternoon he became ill and had to be removed to the hospital, where his condition is considered serious. After descending the ladder and grabbing one of the men, he does not remember any more.

The men had been cleaning out the tank. Apparently the poison broke upon them slowly and as they were gradually killed, they suddenly crumpled up. The tanks have been cleaned in this way for twenty-nine years and never before has there been such an accident.

Mayer, the only one of the four in the tank who is still alive, probably owes his life to the work of Dr. C. D. Belyea, who used first aid methods while in an ambulance traveling to the hospital. Dr. Belyea does not know whether the other three men were dead or merely unconscious when taken from the tank.

An inquest opened this afternoon and adjourned until September 9.

Attorney-General Says Action Up to Vancouver Police

Plats permitting prosecution of miniature golf courses or other ball amusements for Sunday afternoon in the province may be granted to any municipal administration requesting them. It was intimated by Acting Premier Pooley yesterday, in explanation of the attitude of his department on the issue, recently raised at Vancouver through Chief W. J. Bingham, head of the Vancouver city police, flats for the prosecution of four miniature golf courses were asked from the Attorney-General's Department last month, and granted. The police commission of the Mainland city, in possession of the flats, changed its mind, and no prosecutions were brought.

DISTINCTION MADE

Under the Lord's Day Act a distinction is made between places of amusement operated for profit, and clubs for the benefit of members contributing to their support. This according to Acting Premier Pooley, leaves miniature golf courses in the class where they may be prosecuted, if municipal administrations so decide, and secure the necessary fiat from the Attorney-General's Department last month, and granted. The police commission of the Mainland city, in possession of the flats, changed its mind, and no prosecutions were brought.

Fire Takes School as Term Opens

DUNCAN, Sept. 2.—Fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed the Glenora School at an early hour this morning. The school was still standing when those who had attended the Legion dance at Duncan returned this morning, but when the teacher and pupils arrived to start work for the Fall term, shortly before 9 a.m., the building had been reduced to ashes.

There has been a great deal of trouble over school matters in the Glenora district for some years past, and threats against property belonging to the secretary, R. Gavin, are said to have been made.

Two French Flyers Complete Hop From Paris to New York

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, in Question Mark Airplane, Complete Flight Across North Atlantic in 37 Hours 18 Minutes and 30 Seconds—Thousands Greet Aviators

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte intend to fly from New York to South America within a few weeks. They left details of their plan to be settled later, but each told his wife before leaving for New York that they would make the South American flight.

The French Government announced it would make Capt. Dieudonne Coste a Commander of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his achievement in flying from Paris to the United States.

(Associated Press)

VALLEY STREAM, N.Y., Sept. 2.—The first westward airplane flight across the North Atlantic from Europe to New York was completed today—completed by countrymen of the first to attempt such a venture.

37 HRS. 18 MINS. 30 SECS.

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte landed at Curtis Field, on the edge of this Long Island village, at 6:12:30 o'clock Eastern standard time this afternoon, their plane striking out of the gathering dusk just 37 hrs. 18 mins. 30 secs. after it took off from Paris yesterday.

Three years ago Charles Nungesser and Francois Coll attempted a similar flight and flew, instead, to eternity. Since then six other men and two women have tried to fly nonstop from Europe to New York and have died in the attempt. But Coste and Bellonte were not halted by this tragic record of valiant failure.

An inquest opened this afternoon and adjourned until September 9.

WOMAN SLAIN BY POLICEMAN IN MANITOBA

R.C.M.P. Officer Faces Murder Charge Following Shooting at Picnic

IS ALLEGED TO HAVE ACCEPTED INTOXICANTS

DAUPHIN, Man., Sept. 2.—Mrs. Sophie Light, twenty-six, shot yesterday by Constable J. Pitt, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, died early today and a charge of murder has been laid against the constable.

Pitt was arraigned in Dauphin police court today and remanded without pleading. Whether the trial will proceed on a murder charge or the count will be reduced to manslaughter has not yet been decided.

According to eyewitnesses of the shooting, Mrs. Light, with her husband and a friend, had attended an interprovincial picnic sixty-five miles from here. Constable Pitt was on traffic duty at the picnic grounds. The constable is alleged to have accepted several drinks from the Light party and to have been intoxicated. After some "kidding" the policeman drew his gun and fired one shot, the bullet striking Mrs. Light in the abdomen.

Jobbers Were Given Time to Adjust Orders

Prairies See Influx of Canadian Produce From East and West

IMPORTED CAR LOTS
CLEAR AT OLD RATE

Application of the new anti-dumping regulations on prairie markets has been accomplished with little interference with distribution of produce in transit, and with quick adjustment by jobbers and wholesale houses to the new order of things, the Manitoba branch of the Department of Agriculture is advised by its Winnipeg representative.

Action by the Canadian Government to allow cars already arrived at prairie centres, whether customs cleared or not, to be unloaded under the old rate, helped the period of readjustment considerably. Examination of the valuations for duty purposes showed jobbers and distributors that the new order hit only at dumping, and did not stop ordinary channels of trade. Following this, many cars ordered canceled by the jobbers have been reordered, with preference for the Canadian-grown article where possible.

Even with the new tariff ruling American produce are being sold five cents cheaper than the present price of the British Columbia variety.

The anti-dumping regulations opened doors for Canadian produce of both east and west, Ontario peaches finding their way to prairie markets in some quantity, alongside the British Columbia varieties. Some grades of imported peaches are still being brought in.

Search for Firearms Without Success—Eleven Vessels in Buenos Aires

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 2.—Gen. Luis Dellepiane, Minister of War in the Cabinet of President Yrigoyen, tonight sent his resignation to the President, saying he was unable to continue direction of the country's military forces.

La Nación's political expert, believed the resignation would be followed by resignations of other members of the Cabinet. Among those the writer expected to give up office were Jose Abalos, Minister of Public Works, Vice-Admiral Tomas Zureta, Minister of Marine, and possibly others.

Conflicting rumors continued to circulate in the city.

PRESIDENT STILL ILL

Meanwhile officials at the Government House were uncommunicative. President Yrigoyen's illness continued today and the temperature remained fairly high.

A force of marines disembarked in the port early today but returned to their ships after dawn. Police raided the University Popular (the People's University) and searched for firearms but without success.

The raid caused general surprise and intensified rumors of student activity in political circles. None of the students was arrested, however.

REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVE

The destroyers Lariola and Mendoza anchored in the port, bringing the strength of the fleet to eleven vessels. Confinement of troops to their barracks continued more or less strictly, but was known as to what disposition had been made of reinforcements which arrived last night.

Quiet prevailed in the city, with business undisturbed. The only visible agitation was in political circles.

Halibut Schooner Orient Sinks When Rammed by Ss. Admiral Nulton in Early Morning—Only Three of Crew Escape—Others Believed to Have Been Trapped in Hold

Freighter Continued On Run After Search for Victims

SEATTLE, Sept. 2.—Captain Sedolph H. Rudd and nine members of the crew of the little Seattle halibut schooner Orient were drowned in the Gulf of Georgia early yesterday, when that vessel sank after colliding with the Pacific Steamship Company freighter Admiral Nulton.

The other nine drowned were First Mate H. Polson, Tony Anderson, Chris Peterson, Harry Smith, Bob Perry, Martin Burns, Torkian, the cook, all of Seattle, and Andrew Lokke and Don Huseby, of Vashon Island, near here.

Only three men, who were thrown clear of the little vessel, survived from its crew of thirteen. Most of the others were trapped in the hold of the fifty-ton schooner, where they were sleeping.

WEATHER WAS CLEAR

The three, Harold Hanson, Alfred Eklund and Edward Landreth, on their arrival here today said the weather was clear at the time of the crash and that no exchange of signals had been given.

The Admiral Nulton proceeded to Port Angeles today after landing the survivors at Bellingham last night. She was bound south from Ocean Falls when it overtook the Orient, returning from a fishing trip in Alaskan waters.

United States Steamboat Inspector Captain Donald Ames prepared today to take the testimony of the three survivors.

Testimony of Capt. F. L. Stevens, of the Admiral Nulton, probably will be given to steamboat inspection officials at San Francisco, destination of the boat, Pacific Steamship Company officials said.

SHIP SANK QUICKLY

The survivors said the Orient sank within a few minutes, giving the men in their bunks below deck no chance to escape.

Arrangements were made today to send a Canadian salvage vessel to Continued on Page 2, Column 3

British Trades Union Congress Says Protection Necessary to Socialist Aims

DENY INFLUENCED BY
BEAVERBROOK POLICY

(Canadian Press Cable)

NOTTINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 2.—The Trades Union Congress was rudely split asunder for a few hours today when its economic committee, composed of some of the most influential of labor leaders, submitted its long-heralded report advocating a greater measure of economic unity between Britain and the Dominions.

In submitting the report, Ernest Bevin, chairman, and general secretary of the "Tollens" and "Garment Workers' Union, denied that the committee had been influenced by the Empire trade campaign waged by Lord Beaverbrook and Rothermere.

Bullet Ends Brief Career of Outlaw In Peace District

PEACE RIVER, Alta., Sept. 2.—Mike Chonka's brief, colorful career of outlawry was ended yesterday by a sheriff's posse. A murder, wounding and bank robbery were accounted for by Chonka as he was dying from a shot fired by a farmer member of the posse that had searched this district for days.

Last week Chonka held up the Boreway Bank and escaped with a paltry $3—all the loose change at the teller's command. He left town in a frenzy, firing shots into the air as he departed. Authorities immediately started search.

On Saturday night, five days after the bank affair, Chonka was seen in a stolen motor boat, and when the posse was out on the Peace River bridge the fugitive was fast disappearing. Shots ranged after him, and from return fire with a revolver Thorne Colston, chief constable, was shot through the chest.

The hunt became more intense after the Saturday night affray, and yesterday Chonka resisted when the posse was about to arrest him. He was shot.

Before he died he told that he had shot and killed a woman who refused to give him food during his flight. He didn't know her name or where she lived. Police started to go back over Chonka's trail to test his story.

GERMAN LEADER DISAGREES WITH FOREIGN POLICY

Chancellor Bruening Opposes Action by One Member of Cabinet

STATEMENTS AROUSED
PEOPLE ON FRONTIER

By OTTO BROCK
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Service)

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The Chancellor and the Foreign Minister are the only members of the Cabinet responsible for the foreign policy of the Reich.

These words, spoken by Chancellor Heinrich Brüning at a meeting of the Centre party at Trier, in the Rhineland, are considered to be a clear repudiation of Gottfried R. Treviranus, Minister for Occupied Territories, whose recent speeches on revision of the German eastern frontier have aroused wide comment.

Dr. Brüning's disavowal of Herr Treviranus is worthy of note particularly for two reasons. First, because the latter is considered one of the Chancellor's best political friends; and second, because Dr. Brüning's own party has often showed strong anti-Polish tendencies.

IS CRUCIAL QUESTION
A definite point of view of the Cabinet on the Polish corridor, however, was not revealed by Dr. Brüning. Undoubtedly this is a crucial question of German policy for the next few years, but there are no signs of its solution.

In other respects Dr. Brüning was more outspoken. Referring to Aristide Briand's memorandum on his scheme for a united states of Europe, the German Chancellor expressly declared his willingness to co-operate, especially on account of the present economic crisis, which, in his opinion, must play a predominant role in pan-European discussion.

Herr Treviranus' recent statement that sincere understanding with Poland would be impossible so long as the Polish Corridor exists, found strong criticism even among his friends in the present coalition Cabinet, because they realized its bad influence on the relations with France and Poland, which are in a state of nervous suspicion at present.

Prelate Ullrich, prominent member of the Centre party, now assumes leadership in the anti-Polish proclamations. He was rated as one of the most ardent anti-Polish members in the last Reichstag.

The committee also suggests creation of better intercommonwealth trade machinery, and favors formation of a world-wide British economic unit as a necessary step to wards ultimate world economic unity.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Sept. 2.—South Africa definitely opposes the proposal of Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Lord Privy Seal and Secretary of State for the Dominions, that Great Britain purchase the bulk of her primary products from the dominions.

Ons Vaderland, official Government organ, says:
"The whole thing is so ridiculous that we can hardly take it seriously. We have sufficient confidence in Finance Minister N. C. Havenga to treat these ally suggestions in the way they deserve. To bind trade relations to monopolies of any kind, and it is in direct trade relations with the whole world that we can buy and sell in the best markets."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Sept. 2.—After inspecting beaches and plains within a fifty-mile radius of Tokio in search of a suitable place to take off on their projected nonstop flight to Tacoma, Wash., Harold Bromley and Harold Gatty today decided to look elsewhere for a starting field.

Gatty boarded a train for Hachinohe, Aomori Prefecture, where there is much prairie, hoping to find a suitable stretch for a takeoff with a full load of gasoline. Both Bromley and Gatty asserted they were still determined to make a nonstop flight.

The flyers asked and received a week's extension of their permit to use a lighter load nonstop flight, whence they attempted to take off recently, but failed to get their heavily-loaded plane into the air. They said the field was not long enough to permit a take off with a full load.

Ultimately they may be obliged to use the Kasumigaura field, starting with a lighter load and making a one-stop attempt.

PREMIER MAY BE RECALLED
TO CANBERRA

The other ministers declare the reduction of the civil service would prove futile, as they believe it impossible to balance the budget and make up deficits in view of a probable customs deficit of nine millions sterling (about $43,000,000).

The majority of the cabinet, however, oppose the proposal that Parliament should be summoned to deal with the alarming situation. The cabinet will meet again on Friday.

It is unlikely that Prime Minister Scullin will be recalled in the meantime, but should no solution to the crisis be found at Friday's meeting, Mr. Scullin will probably be recalled from Eden, where the Orama, on which he is traveling, will reach on Friday.

REPORT ADOPTED
The motion to refer back the report was finally defeated and the report sustained by a vote of delegates representing 1,978,000 members of the Labor movement against those representing 1,401,000.

The economic committee includes Ben Turner, former Parliamentary Secretary for Mines and president of the National Textile Union, whose name was mentioned by the speaker in connection with that of Alfred Mond, Lord Melchett, Ernest Bevin, Will Thorne, the energetic centennial member of Parliament, Ben Tillett, M.P., who was one of the Labor movement pioneers and was chairman last year of the Trades Union Congress General Council; and John Beard, member of the General Council.

IMPERIAL UNITY NEEDED
The much-discussed resolution of the committee recommends that at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, the British Government should press for the fullest possible development of economic relations between Great Britain and the Dominions. This course, the committee declares, would be "in the interest of the trade union movement."

LINDBERGH GREETED FLYERS
By the achievement today the French flyers flew the Lindbergh trail between the chief cities of the United States and France, and flew it in the more difficult direction.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was here to greet them and was among the first to offer congratulations.

The landing here today was full of color and quick action. Coming over Roosevelt Field, Coate dropped and waggled his wings in signal that the Lindbergh trail had been backtracked at last, for it was from Roosevelt Field that Colonel Lindbergh, then an unknown mail flyer, took off on the flight that made him famous three years ago.

The French plane, named The Question Mark, headed straight for its destination here, and six minutes after it was sighted it settled lightly to the ground, made muddy by recent rains. Appearing suddenly among a score of naval and civilian planes awaiting him in the air, Coate swung in a great half circle about the field, tipped on one vertical bar, and surged down to a three-point landing.

PLANE IS SURROUNDED
The landing was the signal for the crowd of about 5,000, penned behind a high wire enclosure, to attempt a rush on to the field with the Lindbergh reception in France and several long flights here. Most of them were held by the wire and the police, but perhaps a few scaled the high wall, accompanied by a couple of hundred who for one reason or another, had been given special passes, surrounded the plane before its propeller stopped whirling.

Coate had been instructed by radio to taxi directly to the hangar containing the field office, but, apparently fearing that harm might thus come to some members of the crowd, he climbed out, followed by Bellonte, while they were still a hundred yards away from the hangar.

As they slid from the open cockpit to the ground it was plain that the flyers were tired. Their feet trembled clumsily as they stepped from the little ladder and they almost staggered when first they landed, but they didn't get much chance to talk, for he crowd was on them, pressing in, trying to shake hands, slapping the flyers on the back, almost beating them to the ground.

CARRIED TO SAFETY
Police rushed among the crowd to little avail and Coate and Bellonte had to be carried to the safety of the hangar office on the backs of two stalwart mechanics.

In the office Coate and Bellonte were presented to Colonel Lindbergh, who had watched the arrival from a balcony. They spoke briefly in French over two radio networks and then went upstairs in an adjoining hangar to meet various reception committees.

Coate told briefly of his flight, of some threatening weather he and Bellonte had encountered, and expressed his gratification at the successful outcome of the venture.

He did not say how long he was going to stay, or whether he would fly back when he was ready to go.

CELEBRATION IN PARIS
PARIS, Sept. 2.—The greatest celebration since the Armistice was staged by Paris tonight, as loud speakers broadcast the announcement to anxious multitudes that Captain Dieudonne Coate and Maurice Bellonte had conquered the treacherous Atlantic, completing the hazardous westward crossing from Paris to New York.

The explosion of delight was almost unprecedented the pent-up enthusiasm, restrained for hours in fear that the flyers might meet the fate of Nungesser and Goll three years ago, vanished with the official word that victory had been achieved.

Then the loudspeakers opened up with the voice of an announcer at Curtis Field, and the crowds became delirious as the radio man described the landing of France's greatest aviator.

The reception was clear and the words came through almost as well as if the Parisians had been standing on the landing field itself.

Five thousand persons jammed Place de la Opera, another great multitude filled Place de la Concorde, and great groups swarmed in all the boulevards.

OFF TO TEXAS NEXT
NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Captain Dieudonne Coate and Maurice Bellonte, first conquerors of the Paris-New York airway, plan to take off for Dallas, Texas, Thursday morning, they announced through their press representative tonight.

The announcement was in line with a statement made today in Dallas by George F. Smith, Texas newspaper man, who said arrangements would be made for the French flyers to fly to the Texas city to collect $25,000 prize offered by Colonel William Waterwood for a successful Paris-New York-Dallas flight.

There is a ringing for the hands of old friends, but Tromsø's hardy folk, who wage constant warfare against the dangers of the frozen North, are proud of that indomitable courage, which is symbolized by the relic resting in the hospital.

The sealer Bratvaag came steaming slowly into the harbor this forenoon, her flag at half-mast, and bearing on her oaken deck the precious freight which Dr. Gunnar Horn had dug from the ice of White Island early in August.

And here one should explain that while it was hoped the heroic remains in Tromsø hospital represented all three of the Andree expedition, the few bones found in the bottom of Andree's boat are not those of Knut Frankel, according to a pronouncement of scientists.

TRIBUTES PAID
Tromsø is proud that the explorers have returned. Whispered tributes were paid tonight to Andree and his companions by youngsters, who are longing for the time when they will be old enough to follow in the footsteps of their sea-faring fathers and challenge the ice.

And aged men, their faces stamped with the indelible bronze of the Arctic, paced the cobble streets today with heads held high and the gleam of adventure showing in dimming eyes. Many of them knew Andree personally.

Somp, indeed, accompanied him to Spitzbergen, where he set out in his balloon in an attempt to fly over that mysterious spot, which long has lured the adventurous, and until a few years ago eluded them.

As soon as science has done what it can with the bodies, these god-fearing people of Tromsø will gather in their church for a memorial service to the intrepid trio. Then the remains will be carried back to Sweden, there to find a final resting place.

The third man who made the trip in 1897 perished on the long march across the ice, either freezing or falling through a hole.

The boat, containing the bones, was brought to shore on oars by twelve sailors, and it was then that the examination was made.

FOUND BY SAILOR
Dr. Gunnar Horn, told the Associated Press details of how a member of the crew of the Swedish vessel Bratvaag found the remains of Andree's last resting place. The sailors went ashore to make an examination.

"It was with strange feelings that we stood on the beach where the brave Andree and his men thirty-three years ago ended their polar wandering," said Dr. Horn.

"In deep silence we went up toward the camp, which only too plainly showed us what had happened."

"There lay the boat, half buried in snow, with its nose pointing inland. Alongside it lay a sledge. The top of the sledge was level with the ice. On the snow a few yards away a piece of black and red cloth with crude figures cut in for windows, perhaps a part of a tent."

UNDER SHADE OF HILL
"Under the wall of the mountain was Andree himself."

"We recognized him only by the monogram on his jacket. He was leaning against the mountain slope a few yards northeast of the boat. He had worn-out shoes on his feet, but otherwise was well clothed. Beside him lay a gun and an oil stove. There was oil in the stove. And when we pumped it the oil came out in a fine spray, and gas came out at a side."

"The apparatus was quite in good order."

"In Andree's inner pocket was his diary, but only a few pages appeared to have been written on. We also found in his pocket his pencil and a pedometer."

"Between two mounds of earth a short distance away from Andree's body, we found a little later another member of the expedition, who had apparently been laid there by one of the others."

"The body was half covered with small stones. It was 'frozen down' and very hard to get up. We also found in the boat some remains of bones, but we have not been able to decide whether they are human bones. Some other articles were found at different places in the camp."

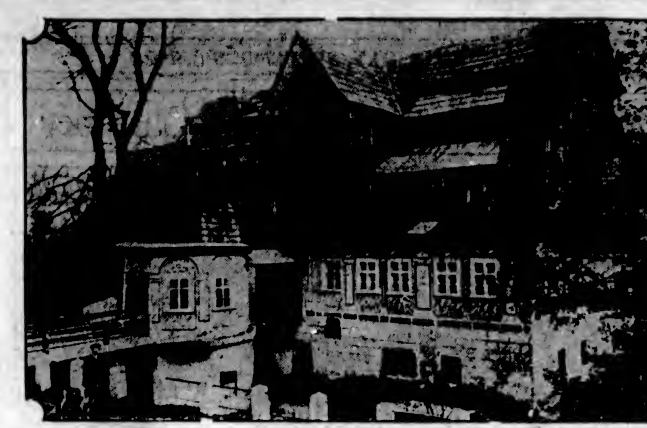

EQUIPMENT FOUND
"Upon examining the boat closer we found many different things. These were the expedition's equipment of all kinds. There were articles of clothing such as stockings and handkerchiefs, an instrument for measuring the velocity of the wind, photographic apparatus, shotgun, a theodolite, sewing articles, a hammer, an axe, and a bag containing navigation books and other things."

"On two of the handkerchiefs was the monogram 'W. S.' (Nils Strindberg)."

"As I said before, the boat lay partly buried in the ice."

"When we got everything free, we

state of nervous suspicion at present.

Prelate Ullrich, prominent member of the Centre party, now assumes leadership in the anti-Polish proclamations. He was rated as one of the most ardent anti-Polish members in the last Reichstag.

The committee also suggests creation of better intercommonwealth trade machinery, and favors formation of a world-wide British economic unit as a necessary step to wards ultimate world economic unity.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Sept. 2.—South Africa definitely opposes the proposal of Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Lord Privy Seal and Secretary of State for the Dominions, that Great Britain purchase the bulk of her primary products from the dominions.

Ons Vaderland, official Government organ, says:
"The whole thing is so ridiculous that we can hardly take it seriously. We have sufficient confidence in Finance Minister N. C. Havenga to treat these ally suggestions in the way they deserve. To bind trade relations to monopolies of any kind, and it is in direct trade relations with the whole world that we can buy and sell in the best markets."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Sept. 2.—After inspecting beaches and plains within a fifty-mile radius of Tokio in search of a suitable place to take off on their projected nonstop flight to Tacoma, Wash., Harold Bromley and Harold Gatty today decided to look elsewhere for a starting field.

Gatty boarded a train for Hachinohe, Aomori Prefecture, where there is much prairie, hoping to find a suitable stretch for a takeoff with a full load of gasoline. Both Bromley and Gatty asserted they were still determined to make a nonstop flight.

The flyers asked and received a week's extension of their permit to use a lighter load nonstop flight, whence they attempted to take off recently, but failed to get their heavily-loaded plane into the air. They said the field was not long enough to permit a take off with a full load.

Ultimately they may be obliged to use the Kasumigaura field, starting with a lighter load and making a one-stop attempt.

The other ministers declare the reduction of the civil service would prove futile, as they believe it impossible to balance the budget and make up deficits in view of a probable customs deficit of nine millions sterling (about $43,000,000).

The majority of the cabinet, however, oppose the proposal that Parliament should be summoned to deal with the alarming situation. The cabinet will meet again on Friday.

It is unlikely that Prime Minister Scullin will be recalled in the meantime, but should no solution to the crisis be found at Friday's meeting, Mr. Scullin will probably be recalled from Eden, where the Orama, on which he is traveling, will reach on Friday.

REPORT ADOPTED
The motion to refer back the report was finally defeated and the report sustained by a vote of delegates representing 1,978,000 members of the Labor movement against those representing 1,401,000.

The economic committee includes Ben Turner, former Parliamentary Secretary for Mines and president of the National Textile Union, whose name was mentioned by the speaker in connection with that of Alfred Mond, Lord Melchett, Ernest Bevin, Will Thorne, the energetic centennial member of Parliament, Ben Tillett, M.P., who was one of the Labor movement pioneers and was chairman last year of the Trades Union Congress General Council; and John Beard, member of the General Council.

IMPERIAL UNITY NEEDED
The much-discussed resolution of the committee recommends that at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, the British Government should press for the fullest possible development of economic relations between Great Britain and the Dominions. This course, the committee declares, would be "in the interest of the trade union movement."

LINDBERGH GREETED FLYERS
By the achievement today the French flyers flew the Lindbergh trail between the chief cities of the United States and France, and flew it in the more difficult direction.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was here to greet them and was among the first to offer congratulations.

The landing here today was full of color and quick action. Coming over Roosevelt Field, Coate dropped and waggled his wings in signal that the Lindbergh trail had been backtracked at last, for it was from Roosevelt Field that Colonel Lindbergh, then an unknown mail flyer, took off on the flight that made him famous three years ago.

The French plane, named The Question Mark, headed straight for its destination here, and six minutes after it was sighted it settled lightly to the ground, made muddy by recent rains. Appearing suddenly among a score of naval and civilian planes awaiting him in the air, Coate swung in a great half circle about the field, tipped on one vertical bar, and surged down to a three-point landing.

PLANE IS SURROUNDED
The landing was the signal for the crowd of about 5,000, penned behind a high wire enclosure, to attempt a rush on to the field with the Lindbergh reception in France and several long flights here. Most of them were held by the wire and the police, but perhaps a few scaled the high wall, accompanied by a couple of hundred who for one reason or another, had been given special passes, surrounded the plane before its propeller stopped whirling.

Coate had been instructed by radio to taxi directly to the hangar containing the field office, but, apparently fearing that harm might thus come to some members of the crowd, he climbed out, followed by Bellonte, while they were still a hundred yards away from the hangar.

As they slid from the open cockpit to the ground it was plain that the flyers were tired. Their feet trembled clumsily as they stepped from the little ladder and they almost staggered when first they landed, but they didn't get much chance to talk, for he crowd was on them, pressing in, trying to shake hands, slapping the flyers on the back, almost beating them to the ground.

CARRIED TO SAFETY
Police rushed among the crowd to little avail and Coate and Bellonte had to be carried to the safety of the hangar office on the backs of two stalwart mechanics.

In the office Coate and Bellonte were presented to Colonel Lindbergh, who had watched the arrival from a balcony. They spoke briefly in French over two radio networks and then went upstairs in an adjoining hangar to meet various reception committees.

Coate told briefly of his flight, of some threatening weather he and Bellonte had encountered, and expressed his gratification at the successful outcome of the venture.

He did not say how long he was going to stay, or whether he would fly back when he was ready to go.

CELEBRATION IN PARIS
PARIS, Sept. 2.—The greatest celebration since the Armistice was staged by Paris tonight, as loud speakers broadcast the announcement to anxious multitudes that Captain Dieudonne Coate and Maurice Bellonte had conquered the treacherous Atlantic, completing the hazardous westward crossing from Paris to New York.

The explosion of delight was almost unprecedented the pent-up enthusiasm, restrained for hours in fear that the flyers might meet the fate of Nungesser and Goll three years ago, vanished with the official word that victory had been achieved.

Then the loudspeakers opened up with the voice of an announcer at Curtis Field, and the crowds became delirious as the radio man described the landing of France's greatest aviator.

The reception was clear and the words came through almost as well as if the Parisians had been standing on the landing field itself.

Five thousand persons jammed Place de la Opera, another great multitude filled Place de la Concorde, and great groups swarmed in all the boulevards.

OFF TO TEXAS NEXT
NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Captain Dieudonne Coate and Maurice Bellonte, first conquerors of the Paris-New York airway, plan to take off for Dallas, Texas, Thursday morning, they announced through their press representative tonight.

The announcement was in line with a statement made today in Dallas by George F. Smith, Texas newspaper man, who said arrangements would be made for the French flyers to fly to the Texas city to collect $25,000 prize offered by Colonel William Waterwood for a successful Paris-New York-Dallas flight.

There is a ringing for the hands of old friends, but Tromsø's hardy folk, who wage constant warfare against the dangers of the frozen North, are proud of that indomitable courage, which is symbolized by the relic resting in the hospital.

The sealer Bratvaag came steaming slowly into the harbor this forenoon, her flag at half-mast, and bearing on her oaken deck the precious freight which Dr. Gunnar Horn had dug from the ice of White Island early in August.

And here one should explain that while it was hoped the heroic remains in Tromsø hospital represented all three of the Andree expedition, the few bones found in the bottom of Andree's boat are not those of Knut Frankel, according to a pronouncement of scientists.

SCHOOLS SETTLE DOWN TO WORK OF TERM

Organization and Registration Occurred First Day—Enrollment Of 8,000 Estimated

Schools in Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich were officially reopened for the Fall term at 9 o'clock yesterday morning with teachers and pupils in their places ready to commence class work.

The greater part of yesterday was taken up with organization work, assigning new pupils to their various grades, and registration of scholars. The total enrollment for this term will not be available until all principals have filed their reports, and this may not be completed until the end of the present week.

The long-dormant school grounds took on a scene of animation as children gathered at the numerous school centres in anticipation of the commencement of a new term and the prospects of meeting old school friends.

With the passing of many scholars into higher grades new books were required, and yesterday afternoon most of the pupils spent "in town" buying the new equipment necessary. Today school work will start in earnest.

Through an error it was announced that the Provincial Normal School would not reopen until September 14. The school will reopen for the Fall term on Wednesday, September 10.

SCHOOL POPULATION

In the Oak Bay Municipality upwards of five hundred scholars registered at the two grade schools and high school. The manual training and home economics classes were opened yesterday morning in the old high school building, but figures of enrollment may not be obtained until the beginning of next week, it is stated. The new technical school is an experiment being made by the Oak Bay board.

It is estimated that about eight thousand pupils will be on the attendance rolls of all schools in Greater Victoria, allowing 6,000 for Victoria proper, 500 for Oak Bay and an equal number in Esquimalt, the balance in Saanich and private schools. The school population, it is understood, will not be greatly changed from the figures of last term, as the newcomers will offset those completing school at the commencement of Summer holidays.

POLICE OFFICERS IN DAMAGE SUIT

Second writ is issued arising out of raid upon alleged Gaming Place

A second writ has been entered in the Supreme Court against Chief of Police John Fry and Traffic Commissioner John T. Boulton, of the police department, claiming $10,000. The writ is issued at the instance of William R. Ellis, who claims damages for being apprehended in connection with a raid of premises on a suspicion of being a gaming place. The plaintiff to the action sets out that he is suffering from war disability, and went into the place and sat down simply for the purpose of recovering from a weak spell. The arrest and following proceedings, he claims, have had an injurious effect upon his health and also caused him suffering of mind. The extent of the damages he places at the sum mentioned in the writ.

FRONTIER RAIDS

Two points of interest arise out of the present raids being made by Afridis in the Northwest Frontier Province of India. One is that Indian Communist propagandists have stirred up the Afridis into a belief that the day of British rule in India is approaching an end. The other is that frontier politics and dissension in India have been linked up and there is some obvious rapprochement between Communism and the Pathans of the frontier. Co-operation between the two has been proved. It remains for the Government of the Northwest Frontier Province to deal with propagandists. The Afridis are ignorant and fanatical. The source of the present trouble is in India itself.

Cabled dispatches, through American sources, would indicate that Peshawar is in danger from the Afridis. It is not likely that they will deliver an attack on the fort and cantonments of that city. It is too well guarded and any open attack would give the British the chance of dealing vigorously with the tribesmen. The campaign of the Afridis seems to have no settled purpose. They have split up into small bodies which lie hidden by day in gullies, in orchards and in caves, and the Royal Air Force finds the greatest difficulty in dealing with them. At night they make sorties, but none of these have been successful.

It is an exaggeration to say that Peshawar is threatened. The tribal outbreak is spasmodic. The Elders have joined the British political officers in trying to prevent the hillmen from engaging in warfare. They are deaf to entreaties, however, and have become, for the time being, the prey of propagandists. In the light of the new developments Great Britain may have to realign her policy on the Northwest Frontier and devise more substantial means for dealing with such outbreaks as the present one.

THE QUESTION MARK

Another transatlantic flight has been accomplished from east to west, and it is the first by which New York has been reached direct from Paris without a stop. The French flyers are responsible for a notable feat. The month of September is an ideal time of the year for transatlantic flights. That does not mean that the latest accomplishments have been favored with conditions which detract from the performance. On the contrary some severe weather was encountered and the feat can be heralded as an indication that the means of flying are constantly improving and that the time is not far distant when there will be a regular air service across the Atlantic and by heavier-than-air machines.

There is something in the nature of a controversy at present as to the relative merits of airplanes and transoceanic flights. The latter are speedier, more economical, and, if not so safe as ships, the time is coming when they will be made so, and with more commodious quarters than have yet been provided. The voyage of the Question Mark is a step towards in aviation. It is a French triumph and recalls that France in the Great War, and ever since, has been in the forefront of aeronautics, with special concentration on the heavier-than-air machines.

THE BODY POLITIC

Lord Dawson, in an address he delivered before the Canadian Club at Ottawa, chose as his subject "Medicine and Statesmanship." The opinions he expressed show he has a very considerable knowledge outside the realm of medicine. In his own particular province he says that diagnosis of disease is the most difficult part of the medical art because the picture varies so greatly with the individual—the doctor must take stock of the personal factor. He must realize the social background. Physiology teaches that the health of a man depends on his own initiative and effort. With some, such initiative and effort are inborn; with others the stimulus of necessity is needed.

On the basis of this lesson from medical diagnosis, Lord Dawson points a moral for statesmen. He says that until the latter part of the last century statesmen thought in terms of individuals—"the fight was for freedom of conscience, equality of opportunity, self-government." Then the State was looked upon as an aggregate of individuals. Now statesmanship has developed a parental function and is concerning itself more and more with constructive measures for the health, prosperity and content of the people. This parental rule is growing. "It provides help for those who are born, taught, sick, hungry, thirsty, unemployed. It regulates wages and hours of labor. It costs the State one-quarter of the national income which shepherds us from the cradle to the grave."

The moral pointed out by Lord Dawson is that the State, while dealing with men and women in the mass, forgets the importance of the individual. He says the governance of the human body prompts useful reflection. The most notable attribute of a human being is individuality. "Parade a thousand men," he says, "and each one will be distinct—the individuality of his finger prints will even insure an identification accurate enough for his undoing." He believes it is the duty of the State to achieve a just weighing of its role and that of the individual. It should appreciate the varying needs of the individual man. Instead of doing this it is running to standardization, and a man so standardized is hypothetical, not real.

His advice is that the State, in some respects, can better fulfil its functions by direction rather than administration. The tendency is now for governments to be forced by their burdens into mechanical methods. He suggests a rearrangement of function, "and one not dissimilar from the layout of the human nervous system. While retaining the power to direct policy and insure a sense of public responsibility, should not the State sometimes delegate the care of essential services each to a special body, which, to be effective, must satisfy certain conditions? Such a body must be small in size—contain those possessed of special knowledge—be so independent in its administration that it will be undisturbed by political exigencies and able to take the long view in the public interest. To the qualities of experience and disinterestedness must be added in certain social services—e.g., those concerned with health—the attribute of humanism."

In commenting on the moral pointed to by Lord Dawson, The London Times says: "Lord Dawson thinks that one of the ailments of the body politic today is an excessive exhibition of paternal care by the State. The obverse of this, likewise, if kindly, repression is failure to give the individual opportunity of developing his special aptitudes, and failure to make use of such special aptitudes as are now available. The body politic, to revert to the analogy, is imposing law on its members and so depriving them of the exercise of many of their functions; it is feeding them, warming them, and securing for them advantages of hygiene, but it is not asking of them that they shall develop the new individualism of special aptitude. Thus it is in danger of becoming merely an aggregation of the dispirited, the dependent or the lazy, an amorphous mass capable of little except the receiving of such gifts of nourishment and safety as may be bestowed on it. To complete the analogy with the living body the mass ought to be differentiated and the way thus opened anew to individual evolution and activity. It is a commonplace of experience that such stimuli as leadership, ambition, and even a degree of hardship, are valuable in releasing activity and in enabling life to be lived on a higher plane. These stimuli ought to find an important place in every organization of society for the sake both of the individual and of the community."

GREAT BRITAIN AND PROTECTION

An economic anomaly in Great Britain is that there is a half protective system in force. It fails to achieve the best economic results because the other half is lacking. The workers there protect themselves, their hours of labor and their wages. On the other hand, what they produce is not protected. It has to face foreign competition under severe handicaps. The produce of Great Britain is open to onslaughts from all quarters. This is a fact which is becoming more patent every day. What has impressed it upon many is the fact that the rising of the unemployed roll to upwards of 2,000,000. The total is so formidable simply because the goods workers, who have not the markets they need, are under protection, which is a panacea for increasing the facilities for work.

There is now a definite swing towards protection in Great Britain. Already, in anticipation of its being put into effect before much time has passed, the trade outlook is improving. It is being freely stated in some quarters that it is only a question of a comparatively short time before Labor itself will become completely converted to a fiscal policy which will be complementary to the protection which now envelops trade unionism. There are cheerful and hopeful signs amid the present depression. The Conservative Party and industry are waiting patiently for the conversion of Great Britain from free trade leanings. Time and the inevitability of fiscal reform are on the side of Mr. Stanley Baldwin.

TYRIAN PURPLE

Purple and mauve are, in our variable climate, the most unthrifty colors which can be worn, as they quickly fade, observes a writer in John O'London's Weekly. It was not so with the famous Tyrian purple, which, in place of fading, was deepened by exposure to the air. We can picture the Roman dandy, as he fared forth in his purple toga, knowing that the bright sunlight, instead of injuring it, would intensify its rich tints. He also knew that only the wealthy and luxurious could afford to wear the Tyrian purple owing to the expensive method of producing it. Its manufacture was a great source of wealth to the merchants in the ancient city of Tyre, which had a world-wide celebrity for its dyeing and weaving establishments. The coloring matter was procured from the shell-fish Murex trunculus, which was found in the Mediterranean and chiefly on the coasts of Asia Minor and Phoenicia. The quantity in each shell was very small, hence great quantities were required. The murex are noted for their bright colors and for their fantastic shapes. During excavations at Pompeii shells of this species were found, having probably been used by painters.

Fabric to be dyed was sometimes moistened with sea water. The natural dye, as found in the shell, was brushed over it two or three times, after which it was exposed to the air and sunshine. At first a faint yellow, it turned to green, then finally to deep purple, and the color was "fast." During the process a disagreeable odor was usual, and during slightly to the fabric for some time after—

Note and Comment

By R. R. D.

All's fair in love and war—and golf.

Monday being a perfect day—or as nearly perfect as any day is likely to be in this world where the weather, like the mind of humankind, is somewhat capricious—Monday being a holiday, and having nothing better to do, we went to see a golf match—the most important of the year in this part of the world. The match was for the city and district championship. It may have been because the weather was so beautiful and the surroundings so completely in harmony with the state of the weather that as we watched the players playing the game we thought of the most stately and dignified of all dances—the dance called the minuett. In order that the minuett may be danced with the proper effect, the dancers must be properly dressed and must move in complete harmony with the slow and dreamy tempo of the music.

Golf is a slow and stately game, quite different in spirit from football or baseball. Golf players, as a rule—that is golf players of the first class—are never in a hurry; they do not consider it good form to rush from tee to tee or up to their ball after they have hit it and hit it again. They play one methodical shot off the tee, stroll slowly up to the ball (with the gallery behind them), examine the lie of the ball very deliberately and with the greatest care, scan the horizon, note the direction and apparent velocity of the wind and the position of the sun, estimate the distance to the green, and after making the correct allowances for everything, hit the ball again, and if it reaches the green, the player, after the usual ritual, either puts it into the hole or lays it off near the hole as to make the next shot safe. Two on and two down—that is the conventional formula. If one player happens to be of ardent temperament and gets ahead of the game, after he has made his shot he sits down beside his ball and takes a refreshing nap until his turn comes to play again.

Being somewhat curious about the spirit of golf as played by the best, or nearly best, players, we inquired of an authority as to the reasons for the ceremonial procedure of some players compared with other players, and were told that certain of the best players were constitutionally deliberate and methodical, while some of the best players assume deliberation and method for the purpose of "getting the goats" (whatever that cryptic saying may mean) of their more nervous and hasty opponents. We were told also that some of the best players have taken notes from the book of the immortal Walter Hagen and set purpose arrive at the first tee a few or many minutes after the time fixed for starting the game. That is part of the strategy of the slow and stately sporting game of golf as practised by some of the head-liners. It is a similar game to that played by the wise old jockeys at a horse race when some of the entries for the race are particularly high strung and new to the game.

If the weather on Monday was as nearly perfect as the weather is ever likely to be in any part of the world at this or any other season of the year, the Uplands golf course was at its best, and the best at Uplands is hard to beat anywhere, so far as we know. If the greens in any part of the world are ever in better shape than the Uplands greens were on Monday, then there must necessarily be a superintendent of greens who knows more about his business than the somewhat irascible North Countryman who did his best to herd the crowd off his beloved greens during the big match play of the year on Monday.

And the play of the players was worthy of the course and the occasion—for the play could not have been better if Archie Compston at his best and Bobby Jones at next to his best had been playing the game instead of two youths named Brynjolfsson and Wills. The driving was long and generally true and the approaching could hardly have been beaten by an Armour. The putting was occasionally somewhat shaky, but there were several long shots for the hole that showed for occasional lapses into the mediocre. If the big gallery which followed the game from the first tee to the finish at the thirty-fourth green was bored at times by the extreme deliberation of the play, it was frequently thrilled by extremely long drives, accurate approaches and long putts. If the judgment of the boys was unimpaired on a few shots out of difficult places, where safety first should have been the watch-words, and where more experienced players would have played a sounder game, there were many really brilliant exhibitions of the royal and ancient game. The better player won, and deserved his victory; but the loser

BRITISH ADMIRALTY CHIEF IS EXPECTED IN ROME THURSDAY

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN (Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.)
ROME, Sept. 2.—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the British Admiralty, will be in Rome Thursday to confer with Admiral Giuseppe Siragusa, Italian naval minister. It was learned today. It is possible that he will also see either Foreign Minister Dino Grandi or Premier Mussolini in an attempt to put new life into the Italo-French naval negotiations.

Mr. Alexander was previously expected here Saturday, but a change in his plans was necessary, due to the British fleet manoeuvres in the Mediterranean.

How B.C. Joined Canada

Story of Confederation as Told by The Colonist, Which Championed the Cause of Union

By NINA NAPIER, M.A.

VI.

The Purchase of Alaska by the United States

IT would have been well had Confederation followed quickly on British Columbia's official request for it. But there were obstacles in the way that could only be removed by time and consideration. Not only had the terms of union to be discussed, but Canada had still to acquire the Northwest Territory from the Hudson's Bay Company, before there could be communication between the East and the West. It was to be years before the resolution passed so unanimously in the Legislative Council at New Westminster bore fruit in union.

In the meantime conditions in British Columbia grew no better. The colony was rapidly going bankrupt, and it was realized that only a change of Government could prevent its utter ruin. Public opinion, which had enthusiastically endorsed the proposed union with Canada, began to vacillate with the inevitable delay. Under such conditions those who were agitating for annexation with the United States, gained a stronger following.

Undoubtedly the purchase of Alaska did much to aggravate the prevailing discontent. Not only was it a blow to the trade with the Russian possessions, but it thrust home to the colony its isolated and unprotected condition, and the seeming indifference of the Home Government to its fate.

An estimate of the value of Alaska in 1867 is of interest in the light of later developments. The region was represented, says an editorial in The British Colonist, not only as a mine of wealth to the fur traders, but also as very rich in precious and base metals; and there was a tradition among the traders that large quantities of gold were collected annually from the natives. It had, too, very valuable fishing grounds. Codfish was cured and sent to the California market, and ice was also exported. But the coast was almost destitute of timber, and there was no good coal, presenting two barriers to the rapid settlement of the country.

Commercially considered, says the editorial, the establishment of a colony of energetic settlers, who would open the mines, and develop the other resources of the country, would certainly prove beneficial to British Columbia. But looking at the question from a political standpoint, it goes on, "we confess we are not a little startled to observe the strides that our American neighbor is making on all sides to hem in and cut off from every chance of territorial expansion the British North American Confederacy."

While even the American newspapers were divided in opinion as to the bargain struck with Russia, there was no doubt in British Columbia as to its value. Alaska might be, as was said in the East, capable of producing nothing but fish oil, furs, icebergs, and Esquimaux, but Vancouver Island was in a position to state that it was a valuable acquisition, and the treaty was regarded here, says The Colonist, as a master stroke of the Secretary of State, Mr. Seward.

Commenting on the final ratification of the treaty with Russia, The British Colonist newspaper says: "It opens to American enterprise the inexhaustible fisheries and the extensive fur trade of the region, besides giving the United States control of a strip of seaboard ten leagues in width. Award San Juan Island and Great Britain will have scarcely a foothold of coast on the Pacific that she can call her own."

British Columbia fruit and vegetables are moving better on Prairie markets, according to a report received yesterday by the Department of Agriculture from its Calgary market correspondent. Rain and snow is reported in the message which read as follows:

"After heavy rain Saturday, weather turned cold. Snow reported in foothills, with frost threatening tonight. This would put an end to local celery, which has supplied the Calgary market for some time. Forty-eight hours extension granted by customs department before inauguration of new duties put jobs in better humor, as it enabled them to clear their stock had reached destination at old schedule."

"Local market quiet. British Columbia shippers report better movement for country points as harvest proceeds. Washington Bartlett, fancy, $2.90; British Columbia, $2.75; California, Washington onions at jobbers' warehouses. Local root vegetables supplying market," concludes the report.

Wave of Optimism Sweeps Mexico After Declaration

President Pascual Ortiz Rubio Promises Unrestricted Freedom of Thought, Absolute Liberty of Religious Creed and an Unmuzzled Press

By A. ALICANTARA PASTOR (Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Service)

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 2.—Unrestricted freedom of thought, absolute liberty of religious creed and an unmuzzled press, promised by President Pascual Ortiz Rubio in his first address to Congress, has aroused such a wave of optimism that it is comparable only to the first speech made by former president Plutarco Elias Calles to that body.

CERTAIN CONFIDENCE
President Ortiz Rubio's message was essentially optimistic and creative of confidence. Its keynote was appeal for co-operation and its purpose was to impress upon the people an earnest desire to bring tranquility of conscience. Coming at a time when the national finances are far from buoyant, it is interpreted as an important step towards economic recovery. Seldom has Mexico heard such lofty ideals set forth by its chief executive, and President Ortiz Rubio overnight has won the sympathy of his countrymen, who heretofore have viewed his advent into office with indifference.

His expression regarding the freedom of thought, absolute liberty for the press and his purpose to cut away the agrarian movement from political connections found a responsive echo among the wealthy, who always have viewed revolutionary administrations with distrust.

MIDDLE CLASS PLEASED
Announcement of his avowed purpose not to ignore the religious aspects of Mexican social life and his determination to respect and make respect for the freedom of religious creed has won for him the sympathy of the middle class, the majority of whom are Catholic.

President Ortiz Rubio explained by setting forth his honest opinion regarding this subject that he had not intended to criticize the past administrations, but it was due to his knowledge of statesmen that he must take into consideration the thoughts and desires of the people, that they rule in order to bind together the Government and the people.

New U.S. Envoy Arrives at Ottawa

L.T.-COL. Charles Hanford MacNider, of Mason City, Iowa, newly appointed American minister at Ottawa in succession to Hon. William Phillips, arrives in the capital by airplane, to take over new duties. Mrs. MacNider accompanied her husband on his flight from Washington. Photo shows Mr. B. K. Riggs (Derby hat), secretary of the American Legation here; Col. MacNider (Panama hat) and Mrs. MacNider.

President Ortiz Rubio's statement that muzzling of the press will be something unheard of during his term of office, thus laying down a policy quite at variance with that of his predecessor.

COMPLETE FREEDOM
The President declared that he is firmly determined to see the newspapers enjoy complete and unrestricted freedom to express opinion of whatever political shade when discussing the personality of Government officials. He believes it preferable for officials to suffer inconveniences due to criticism rather than to interfere with the free expression of thought.

This favorable reaction to President Ortiz Rubio's address is comparable to that provoked by former president Calles in his first message to Congress shortly after his inauguration. His speech was essentially a political message, while that of President Ortiz Rubio sets forth the national policy for the reconstruction of Mexico.

It is remembered that former President Calles lost his popularity which he had won overnight when he reversed his opinion a few weeks later, especially because of his bitter railing against the press for an alleged misinterpretation of his announced agrarian policy. It now remains to be seen whether President Ortiz Rubio will be forced to modify his opinion through a possible abuse of the freedom of his offers to the newspapers.

Unique Display of Footwear In Local Store

At Munday's Shoe Store, 1203 Douglas Street, is now staged a unique display of two new lines of ladies' footwear, the first of these to reach Victoria. They are products of the Samuel Shoe Company and the Vitality Shoe Company, respectively. The Samuel Shoe, the outcome of the latest designers' art, mainly includes a wide variety of dress models, suitable for evening and formal occasions, featuring the latest styles as shown at the fashion shows at St. Louis and Boston. They are in colors that reflect the latest word in good taste and distinction—black, dark brown, dark blue, blue, crepe de Chine, suède, ring lizards. The Vitality Shoe, represented by a large selection of models for street and day wear, features a special point of built-in support, giving absolute steadiness to the foot and complete comfort, together with what bids fair to be the most distinctive design of the season. In both these lines a big selection of all sizes and widths are carried, given splendid display facilities in the windows and counters of Munday's Shoe Store.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock at Christ Church Cathedral, Very Rev. C. B. Quainton, Dean of Columbia, officiating. Many beautiful flowers covered the casket and hearse, and interment was made in Royal Oak Burial Park.

The pallbearers were C. C. Pemberton, W. H. Bullock-Webster, Alan B. McKill, R. P. Taylor, R. M. Bird and Andrew Hamilton.

Melchett Urges Merger Of Empire Economically

Member of British House of Lords Predicts Great Britain Will Turn From Open Door Policy to One of Protection

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—"A merger of the British Empire economically" was urged on Canadians here yesterday by Lord Melchett, member of the British House of Lords, and widely-known financier, in an address delivered at the York Club. The speaker depicted the British Empire potentially the most powerful organization economically of all history, wasting its true economic strength through the "small town" commercial policies of its individual wide-throng units. And yet, he declared, the Empire, with its manufacturing surpluses in the Motherland and its agricultural surpluses in Canada and elsewhere was devastated, as if by divine providence, to fulfill every economic need of a great worldwide commercial unit.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM
The solution to the Canadian problem of how it disposes of surplus wheat, he continued, was right in front of Canadians if they would seize it. But Canadians could not sit back and expect to sell everything to Great Britain without purchasing anything in return. He then referred to South Africa as an illustration. This sister dominion, he proceeded, wanted to sell more corn to Great Britain, but bought motor cars manufactured in United States, preference to British-made products.

"Make no mistake, Britain is not without suitors for her commercial hand," Lord Melchett said. And if Canada was not going to buy anything from Britain in return for Britain's purchase of Canadian wheat, who could blame Britain for making bargains "with other people prepared to make better terms with us." But why, he asked, should Great Britain buy her meats from Denmark and her grain from somewhere else, when all these necessities were to be had within the Empire and all she asked in return was a fair trade deal?

MAKES PROPOSAL
He proposed a turn by Britain from the "open door" policy to one of "protection," declaring "we will not remain the dumping ground of the surplus products of other countries."

There was no occasion for alarm, he said, over Lord Beaverbrook's Empire free trade utterances. Lord Beaverbrook had no thought that Canada would completely throw away her tariffs in the proposed closer binding of Empire.

POSITION OF COMPTROLLER IS OUTLINED

Replies To Charges Made by Auditors Respecting Civic Departments

FILES ANSWER WITH VANCOUVER COUNCIL

VANCOUVER, Sept. 2.—Declaring that he has exercised supervisory control over civic departments by close association with department heads, and observing that appointment of an internal auditor was recommended by him on February 19, 1929, City Comptroller A. J. Pilkington this morning presented to the city council his reply to charges made by Hellwell, MacLachlan & Co., special auditors, who investigated civic departments.

The auditors stated that conditions which were exposed in the recent City Hall investigation resulted from ineffective control and supervision of departments; incomplete scope of audit by external auditors, and complete absence of an internal audit.

The council subsequently instructed Mr. Pilkington to submit a report explaining his position in regard to the auditors' allegations. In dealing with the question of supervision, the comptroller points out that besides maintaining a close personal knowledge of each department, he has an intimate personal knowledge of general details relating to each department. He also remarks that at all times he has endeavored to maintain full co-operation with the heads of departments, without usurping their duties or reducing in any way their responsibilities.

Relating to the auditors' allegation of lack of internal audit, Mr. Pilkington first refers to the fact that in February of last year he recommended appointment of an internal staff auditor, and the council appointed W. L. Woodford to that post. He points out, however, that the internal audit was hampered by the fact that Mr. Woodford was required for other services, by her husband and two small children; her mother, Mrs. C. W. Rhodes, and one sister, Miss Ethel Rhodes.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at Christ Church Cathedral, with Rev. Dean Quainton officiating. C. R. Sharratt, H. S. Beaton, Senator G. H. Barnard, Major C. M. Roberts, Dr. F. M. Bryant and J. W. Ambrey acted as pallbearers. The remains were forwarded last night to Vancouver for cremation.

PROMINENT ARMY VETERAN PASSES

There passed away at the Jubilee Hospital on Sunday last Michael Riordan, aged sixty-seven years. The late Mr. Riordan was an imperial army veteran, born in Cork, Ireland. For the past twenty-two years he had been a resident of the district of Esquimalt, but lately had resided at 462 Foster Street. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Ellen Horgan, of Cork, Ireland. The funeral will take place at 8:40 o'clock this morning, when the cortege will leave the Sands Funeral Parlors on its way to celebrate mass by Rev. Father A. B. Wood, at St. Mary's Church, Victoria West. The remains will be laid to rest in Ross Bay Cemetery.

Obtained Bail Last Night

George Stevens and Louis C. Bentley last night secured cash bail to the amount of $100 each and left the city lockup. They were charged with vagrancy and had been repeatedly remanded. It was suggested by the city prosecutor that there were reasons for believing that the men were associated in some way with Arthur McLean, who is held

125 Million Explosions in each grain of wheat

... thus making Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice virtually as nourishing as hot cooked cereals.

HERE'S an utterly different ready-to-eat cereal! Crisper ... crunchier ... more flavorful. And with virtually the same nourishment as hot cooked cereals!

That's because Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice are made in an entirely different way from all other cereals. Plump, choice grains of wheat and rice are sealed in huge bronze guns. The guns are revolved in fiery ovens. The natural moisture in each grain is changed to steam. Then the guns are fired. 125 million explosions occur in every grain. Each tiny food cell is blasted open. Thus every particle of the grain is made as completely digestible as though they had been cooked for hours. And so Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice attain the virtual nourishment of hot cooked cereals.

This process explains why Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice have an extra delicious flavor ... plus a crisp light daintiness that tempts the appetite. Serve these little nuggets of rich grain nourishment for breakfast, luncheon and supper. They digest so easily that they're extra good for children's evening meal. Your grocer has Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice. Order today. The Quaker Oats Company.

TORONTO FAIR CROWDS WATCH FLYER KILLED

Captain Charles Sutton
Drowned and Mechanic
Injured in Crash

WIND CAUGHT PLANE
IN ESSAYING BANK

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—Caught by a wind as they banked around a marker on the course, Captain Charles Sutton, Toronto, was killed, and his mechanic, Claude Mills, also of this city, was injured when their Fokker cabin plane crashed into Lake Ontario.

The crash occurred early this evening in view of thousands of people who lined the seaway to witness the aeronautic programme of the Canadian National Exhibition. According to witnesses, the machine was roaring down the stretch in preparation for the races and was just banking around the turn when the wind appeared to catch the tail and sent the machine spinning downward. It struck the water with terrific force, though it remained afloat. The pilot apparently was injured and thrown into the lake. Mills, however, appeared to be only slightly injured, though suffering from shock. He was rushed to the emergency hospital on the grounds. Immediately following the crash, lifeguards and speed patrols scurried to the scene but could find no trace of the pilot's body. The crash occurred about a mile and a half offshore, and on account of the depth of the water, dragging operations for the body may be difficult.

LABOR LEADER GIVES MESSAGE

William Green Urges Establishment Secured Wage Earners' Income

GUARD AGAINST POVERTY

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Sept. 2.—In an address at the state fair here yesterday, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said:

"Those who manage and own industry, those who control and administer the affairs of Government, and those who work are represented by men of their own choosing will be well high guilty of moral and criminal negligence if they permit society to be intermittently exposed to the devastating and destroying effects of cyclical periods of unemployment."

The labor leader urged the establishment of a secured wage earners' income as a guard against poverty and suffering during such periods.

Declaring the celebration of Labor Day without attention to "the overshadowing problem of unemployment," was impossible, Mr. Green said, industry was responsible because the consuming market could not absorb mass production.

He said that no serious effort had been made to deal with the problem of technological unemployment or to extend assistance to the victims of mechanical displacement and that only by meeting this problem could the nation hope to maintain every human being as a consuming unit.

OPHTHALMOLOGISTS BEGIN SESSIONS

Three-Day Programme Includes Papers by Leading Specialists of Pacific Coast

The three-day sessions of the Pacific Coast Oto-Ophthalmological Society will open at the Empress Hotel this morning at 9 o'clock, and yesterday afternoon and early today the members were pouring into the city, a majority accompanied by their wives.

The programme, as already published, provides for morning sessions each day, beginning at 9 o'clock. During the luncheon period there will be round-table discussions, for which the members are separating into various groups; and one of the very interesting leaders in one of these sectional discussions will be Mr. Bishop Harman, of London, England, who has just reached here after attending the sessions of the British Medical Association at Winnipeg, Dr. Jackson, of Denver, Colorado, another of the outstanding attending the meetings, will give a paper this morning on "The Sensitiveness of the Retina."

Dr. Jones, of Boise, Idaho, president of the society, will preside at all sessions.

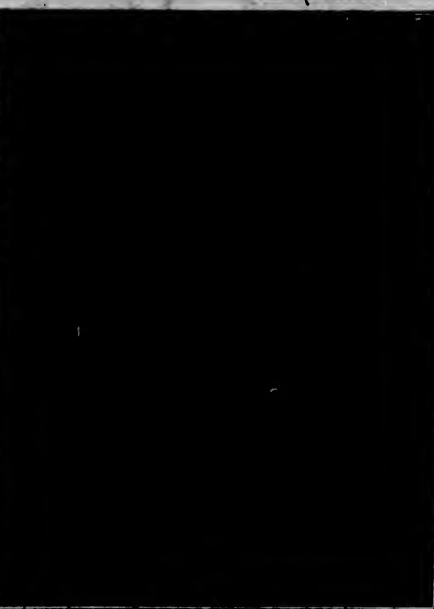

A good programme has been drawn up for the social entertainment of the visitors also. One of the first events will be at the Empress Hotel tonight, when the Oto-Ophthalmologists and the members of the British Medical Association and their wives and others accompanying them, will be guests at a dinner at which the Provincial Government and the city will be formally represented.

Will Write for Colonist

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

THE services of Dr. Barton have been secured by The Colonist to write on health subjects. His daily articles will appear in this paper exclusively in Victoria.

Dr. Barton is a Canadian medical man of distinction, and his opinions are quoted internationally. He is a former president of the Medical Board of Canada; physical director, for sixteen years, for the University of Toronto; a member of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons, and medical examiner and physician for the Amateur Athletic Union.

Dr. Barton does not conduct a question and answer column, declaring that untrained patients cannot correctly diagnose their ailments, and holding that to properly treat a patient the physician must be in contact with him. He does, however, give very valuable advice on matters of general health and upon the conditioning of the body.

The first of Dr. Barton's articles for Colonist readers is to be found in today's issue.

THEFT CASE TO COME UP TODAY

Henry Simpson, Informant in $10,000 Charge, Will Return South Quickly

OTHER REMANDS GIVEN

The charge against Arthur McLean of perpetrating the theft of $10,000 from Henry W. Simpson was not dealt with in the police court yesterday. The accused will come up this morning before Magistrate Jay. It was stated in court yesterday by the city prosecutor that the desire was to have the evidence of Mr. Simpson, taken today, so that he might be at liberty to return to the South on important business. If possible, the whole case will be disposed of today, as it is deemed well to have Mr. Simpson present to be called in rebuttal should this be necessary.

George Stevens, held on a charge of vagrancy, appeared in court again yesterday, when the evidence of Detective Phipps, who was given. The latter told of the arrest of the accused, who was charged with stealing a car, both of whom were supposed to be connected with McLean.

The accused, Stevens, was in Bentley's room in the hotel with the detective and other members of the police force who were entered, according to the evidence of Detective Phipps, McLean, who was present also, told the accused the police were there to arrest him. Stevens went to his own room.

A search of that room revealed $30 in bank notes, several steamship tickets, a code, allegedly of the International Stock Exchange, cards and other documents from the same institution, a $100,000 bond in the International Stock Exchange, a letter from the Horsemen and Breeders, Incorporated, of New York City, and a number of other documents.

A letter was read which offered "to make any while the sun shone," and various other good counsel. This letter was addressed to another name other than that of Stevens.

The accused expressed a desire to meet this with the help of counsel and was informed by Magistrate Jay that he would have the fullest opportunity to get counsel and to present his case.

An adjournment was accordingly taken until Thursday in order to opportunity to get counsel and to present his case.

When Bentley was called he was also remanded until Thursday and in each case the opportunity was afforded them of obtaining bail by reducing it from $500 to $100.

The Piano Is Still

..and Always Will Be..

The Basic Musical Instrument

BECAUSE human nature is as it is, the piano must continue to be the principal musical instrument in tens of millions of homes on this continent. At least that is our considered opinion, and it is a viewpoint which has been expressed time and again by the most eminent educational authorities of today.

Marvelous as has been the advancement of other forms of musical entertainment for the home, there could be no more erroneous premise than that everybody wants his music in ready-made form. The fact is that millions of people in the future, as in the past, will want to play their own music and they can do this most satisfactorily by fingering the keys of a piano.

Every year thousands upon thousands of children are beginning their first lessons on this grand old instrument. In these lessons they acquire the fundamentals of instrumental music, as well as a better appreciation of music as an art. Their far-seeing parents realize that ability to play the piano gives access to the great tonal masterpieces of mankind just as being able to read throws wide the door of literature to all who seek the inspiration of immortal pages.

In the rush of modern living it is easy to overlook the obvious. It is easy to miss the thought that the greatest single object of admiration in many homes, and the finest influence in the lives of people throughout the civilized world is still the piano.

We repeat, the Piano Is Still . . . and always will be . . . the Basic Musical Instrument.

YOUR SHAPE MAY AFFECT YOUR HEALTH

I have spoken before about the three general shapes of individuals: one with the short narrow body and long legs; one with the long wide body and short legs; and one with what might be called normal length of body and legs.

The narrow thin short body on long legs would be more likely (but not necessarily) to have lung trouble and indigestion.

The wide long body and short legs would be stronger naturally, but as he would be a good "feeder," he was more likely to have liver, heart and kidney ailments.

The individual with normal length of body and legs would have a little better chance than either of the others in avoiding definite ailments.

However, there is another factor enters into this matter and that is the ductless glands.

Too much thyroid activity and you get the thin nervous individual, easily flushed, feels the heat, keeps his heart rapid, often grows very tall in his teens.

Not enough thyroid activity and you get the stout, heavy, over-weight, habitual headache. Activity of adrenal glands, situated one above each kidney, means strength of body and mind. Inactivity of these glands means long slender bones, tending to tuberculosis.

Activity of the pituitary glands in the skull means great increase in length and strength of bones such as in these "giants" of the circus side show.

Inactivity or lowered activity of these glands means shortness of height, increase in fat about body, bones thin, teeth irregular.

Activity of parathyroid glands, behind breastbone, means shortness of height.

Less or lowered activity of these glands means more length and slenderness of bone, thus increase in height. Also while intelligence is normal there is mental depression very marked.

The secretion of the pancreas gland affects the handling of the sugar in the blood.

The secretion of the thymus gland in the neck affects growth of bone and nerves and muscles, as does also the pineal body in the skull.

You can thus see that you are to a considerable extent what your glands have made you.

You are what you are in shape. Take a look at yourself.

If thin get out of doors and eat good food.

If tendency to be stout, eat less and take more exercise.

This is all you can do about it, but this is really all you need to do about it, because Nature is really very kind to us.

Some Paris Innovations

Changes in Lingerie

New Lines in Frocks for Day and Evening Wear Necessitate Up-to-Date "Undies"

With the complete change in the fashion of clothes has come a complete change in the cut and style of lingerie, says an article in The Times (London). The hips must now be closely defined, and these necessitate shaped yokes and belts upon all undergarments, the fullness flowing out just above the knee in the case of evening petticoats. These are dainty in befrilled chiffon and lace-trimmed georgette and are often made to hang in exactly the same manner as the gown worn above them, sometimes dipping at the sides, sometimes in points at intervals all round, and sometimes merely flared with an even hem.

LACE TRIMMINGS
Creme de Chine is a valuable material for lingerie because it is suitable for day and evening alike. Although many sets are made in bright colors, black, or pastel shades, nothing will ever supersede the flesh tint, although that tint may vary from season to season from a pale flush rose to a warm apricot flush. Lace is used a great deal, especially for nightdresses, which are now more worn than pyjamas. Ecru lace and a dim grey shade of fine French lace are chiefly used, generally with the newest shade of deep flesh color. Deep yokes of it, lined with net and with long attached strips to outline the wide open armholes of the nightgown, are effective, and pointed yokes stretching wide over the shoulders. Some chiffon nightdresses have little fluffy capes attached, like many of the printed chiffon Ascot frocks.

PIJAMA SUITS
Pyjamas are made with very wide trousers which almost give a skirt effect; are usually sleeveless and worn with a long-sleeved coat. They can be of the severest tailored cut, or most frilly and elaborated. Cocktail suits are usually made of heavy satin with trousers of one color and an embroidered coat in a contrasting shade, and are nearly always of an Eastern design.

FOUNDATION GARMENTS
The variety of belts and corselettes is large. Some of the former have shaped, reinforced yokes, some are made of tricot, some of silk or cotton elastic entirely, and some of batiste with elastic inset over the hips or back. It is always better to visit a corsetiere or corset department of some big store when in need of a suspender belt, because there are now so many shapes and styles designed to fit the different types of figures and to give comfort and help to those in need of any special support, and the advice of an expert is always freely given. For the slim or medium figure the corselette is ideal, and it can be had in many materials, even in lace. In every case they are now made with the uplift brassiere usually in a lighter fabric than the belt portion below, which is always carefully cut to hold in the diaphragm and hips. Some hook at the side, some lace at the back, all have four to six suspenders, and a few are slightly bonny back and front with removable bones, so that they can be easily laundered.

In Canada there is a rage now for cotton lingerie, which is made in lace-trimmed lawn and embroidered volles, particularly those with a tiny floral pattern on a pastel-tinted ground. Cotton is so cool. For sports wear boyish vests and shorts are supplied.

WORK IS STARTED ON DAMAGED FREIGHTER

Temporary Repairs Being Effected By Yarrows, Ltd., on Taigen Maru Following Collision

Temporary repairs on the Japanese freighter Taigen Maru, which was damaged in a collision late on Sunday afternoon with the Union Oil Company's tanker Unacarbon, five miles east of Race Rocks, is being carried out by Yarrows, Limited, in the Esquimalt Harbor. It is expected that the work will be completed on Friday, following which the vessel will proceed to Rotterdam, Holland.

Dense fog which hid from view the American side of the Strait of Juan de Fuca all Sunday afternoon, is held responsible for the mishap, in which the Taigen Maru had her stern badly smashed and a number of her forward plates twisted.

With a complete cargo of lumber outbound for the Orient, the Taigen Maru was anchored off Port Angeles. The Unacarbon, inbound with a full cargo of oil, crashed into the nose of the freighter, it is understood. The shipper of the tanker rang for full speed astern and the Unacarbon immediately backed away. Undamaged by the crash, the oil tanker proceeded to Seattle.

After being put into this condition to continue her journey to Japan, the Taigen Maru will be permanently repaired following her arrival in the Far East. Her cargo has not been touched during the repairs here.

Built in 1917 at Seattle by the Skinner & Eddy Company, the Taigen Maru was formerly the Hannah Nelson. She was later acquired by the Shimonmura of Katsushika, of Tokyo.

King Bros. local agents, are handling the vessel during her stay at Esquimalt.

AERIAL SURVEY COVERS GROUND IN QUICK ORDER

Future Road Location Near Hope Ascertained in Single Day

GROUND PARTY WOULD HAVE TAKEN MONTHS

Aerial survey undertaken by officials of his department along the course of the Fraser River, last week, accomplished in one day what would have taken two months to decide by means of ground parties. It was stated yesterday by Hon. N. E. Loughhead, Minister of Public Works, that the reconnaissance showed proposed future duplication of the road from Harrison Hot Springs eastward through a pass in the mountains, and then back along American Creek to the Fraser, unfeasible because of its circuitous nature.

Continuation of the Dewdney trunk road up the north bank of the Fraser to the beginning of the Cariboo road, when made, will follow close to the river, directly east from Agassiz to Hope.

Utilization of the mountain pass for the proposed extension to Hope would take the new road five miles beyond Hope before it could join up with the Cariboo road, it is reported. As the beginning of the Hope-Princeton Highway to the Southern Interior, Hope is regarded as a focal point, and duplication of the Vancouver-Hope Highway through an accessible pass beyond Hope will not be entertained.

The aerial survey added much definite information to the data of the department, which will find its way into future maps of the area. It will be followed almost immediately by a ground survey of the route along the north side of the Fraser, shown from the air as the only feasible alternative to tentative plans held by the department.

Engineers of the department who made the aerial survey were flown from Vancouver in a machine piloted by Major Don MacLaren, the plane party gleaming, between sunset and sundown in one day, what field crews would have required two laborious months to ascertain.

Farmer Brown's Boy Is Called Home

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The fun that doth to anger lead
Becomes a sorry thing indeed.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy and Farmer Brown himself were at work in the cornfield. Jim Crow was sitting on a fence-post. He was watching them work, and to hear him talking crow-like, you might have thought he was boasting the job. By and by, the sound of a horn reached them. It came from the house. It was a signal. It was the signal Mother Brown always uses when she wants Farmer Brown or Farmer Brown's Boy to come up to the house.

"Run along up and see what your mother wants," said Farmer Brown.

Farmer Brown's Boy put his hoe against the fence and started up the Long Lane on his way to the house. Jim Crow flew up and alighted on Farmer Brown's Boy's shoulder. So presently they reached the barnyard. Jim Crow flew around back of the barn. Farmer Brown's Boy was very much surprised when he opened the door and caught a glimpse of Mother Brown's face. He knew at once that something had happened. He knew that she was angry. He couldn't remember when he had seen his mother look quite so provoked.

"Where's that crow?" snapped Mother Brown.

"I don't know," replied Farmer Brown's Boy. "He rode up from the cornfield on my shoulder, so he is somewhere around."

"Look at that wash!" commanded Mother Brown.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked at the clothes basket once more piled high with snowy linen. "Well," said he, "what of it?"

"This is the second time those clothes have been washed this morning," declared Mother Brown, "and all on account of that pesky bird of yours who got to do with your washing!" he demanded.

"Everything!" retorted his mother.

"This washing has been on the lines once and when my boy was turned that crow pulled every clothespin and dropped the wet clothes on the ground. What is more, he stole the clothespin, and that is why I've called you. I can't hang clothes out without clothespins."

The next story: "Farmer Brown's Boy Finds the Clothespins."

"But how do you know it was the crow? Did you see him?" Farmer Brown's Boy asked.

"No, I didn't see him!" snapped Mother Brown. "But no one else would have taken those clothespins."

"But," protested Farmer Brown's Boy, "he went down with me to the cornfield this morning and he came back with me, so how could he have pulled your clothespins?"

"That bird has a perfectly good pair of wings," replied Mother Brown. "Probably he flew up there and then flew back down to the cornfield without your knowing it. You can depend upon it, that pesky bird is responsible. I have stood for a lot of his mischief, but this is too much. Now you go look for those clothespins."

Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know what to say. He wanted to laugh. Yes, sir, he actually wanted to laugh. He was sorry for his mother and he was sorry that he had all that extra work to do; but the funny side of it struck him and he wanted to laugh. He didn't quite dare do it, however. He knew well enough that she would be ready to laugh herself by and by, but he also knew that she didn't feel like laughing then. So he went out to look for Jim Crow. He had an idea that if he could find Jim Crow he could find those clothespins.

Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know what to say. He wanted to laugh. Yes, sir, he actually wanted to laugh. He was sorry for his mother and he was sorry that he had all that extra work to do; but the funny side of it struck him and he wanted to laugh. He didn't quite dare do it, however. Harold Brynjolfson Captures City Golf Crown From W. Wills

Uplands Youngster Plays Dazzling Game to Defeat Macaulay Club Champion in Finals, 2 and 1—J. Todd Wins First Flight Honors

Harold Brynjolfson, Uplands Club champion, won the city golf crown on his home course Labor Day by defeating Willard Wills, Macaulay Club monarch, in the thirty-six-hole final after one of the greatest battles in the history of the event, 2 and 1. Although out-driven hole after hole, Brynjolfson's approaching and putting more than made up for Wills' advantage.

The newly-crowned champion started off in grand style and held a three-hole advantage at the twelfth. Wills exploded some beautiful golf from then to the seventh, where he squared the match. However, the pair went to 30-up lead by winning the eighteenth.

The first hole on the afternoon jaunt was halved in five, and then Wills squared the match by taking the twentieth with a par four. Play continued in the same manner from green to green, first one taking the lead and then the other. On the twenty-fourth hole, Brynjolfson's thirty-five-foot putt drew great applause from the large gallery. He holed out from the edge of the green for a birdie three.

Brynjolfson took the lead at the next hole and never relinquished it for the remainder of the journey. He continued playing dazzling golf, and jumped at every opportunity offered by his opponent. On the twenty-sixth hole Wills ran into real trouble when his drive caught the trees and dropped down behind a sturdy oak. He was forced to play it by standing on one side and swinging around the tree.

Again at the twenty-ninth hole Wills ran into misfortune when his second, a long iron, took a bad bounce and halted behind an oak tree. Brynjolfson won the hole to go 4 up and 6 to play. The next two were halved and the champion became dormie four. Wills rallied with the assistance of two stymies and won the next two holes. The match ended on the thirty-first hole, when Brynjolfson gained a half in four.

R. L. Challoner won the long driving with an aggregate yardage for three drives of 790, an average of 263 1/3 yards. J. Todd, who won the first flight honors, captured the prize for the longest drive by wall-opping one 368 yards, a distance of a junior, won the approaching contest.

Local Softballers Capture Both Ends Of Double-Header

An all-star team, representing the Westholm Softball League, scored two great victories at Nanaimo on Labor Day by taking a doubleheader from the Motor Levellers, Nanaimo, and Quesno, Vancouver, respectively. The locals won from the Up-Islanders, 2-2, and the Mainlanders, 4-2. Acres pitched the first game and Thomas the second for the Victoria squad.

The batting of Bob Nicol and the catching of Jack Caddell were the outstanding features in the all-stars victories.

A meeting of representatives of juvenile football clubs will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A.

LOCAL RIDERS WIN B.C. BIKE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Parrot and Robins Capture One and Two-Mile Titles at Meet Here

CYCLISTS PILE UP IN ONE-MILE EVENT

Two British Columbia bicycle championships will remain in Victoria as a result of the cycling meet staged at the Royal Athletic Park on Labor Day under the auspices of the Victoria Cycling Club. Godfrey Parrot and Glen Robbins won the capital city titles who captured the provincial honors.

Parrot won the one-mile British Columbia honors, while Robbins carried off the two-mile championship. In the former race, a bad accident took place shortly after the event started in which four riders piled up. Leo Marchiori, Vancouver flash, was leading the pack when one of his three blew and the three following close on his heels crashed into him while traveling at a fast clip. Harold Davies, Vancouver; Lew Rush and Glen Robbins, Victoria, figured in the smash. The Mainland riders were badly cut about the body, while Rush and Robbins mounted their wheels and finished.

Jack Stevenson won the one-mile novice for a starter and then stepped up to the one-mile junior British Columbia title from a fast field. Muzz Patrick finished first in the junior half-mile and Jimmy Hallam in the quarter-mile under fourteen. The half-mile open honors went to George Farmer, while Bev Peden captured the E. Todd Cup for the fastest time around the track. The Peden Cup, emblematic of the club one-mile honors, was won by Glen Robbins, with Stewart second and Farmer third.

FIREMEN WALLOP SONS OF CANADA

Local Ball Champs Defeated by Mainlanders, 2-0, in First B.C. Play-Off

Vancouver, Sept. 2.—Victoria's Sons of Canada went to the cleaners Monday afternoon. Firemen took them there, and with their little hoses and hatchets, fashioned a whitewash brush for the Islanders. Twenty-four runs the Firemen scored against their guests at Athletic Park in the first game of the provincial senior A baseball semi-finals. And there was no reply from the Victoria camp.

There wasn't an awful lot to it as a baseball game. It was just a case of how many hits and how many runs the Firemen could get in the space of nine innings. They got the same number of hits and runs, and did it all in one hour and forty-five minutes.

Sixth and seventh innings were really a trying time for those on the Victoria line who really cared for the serious matters of life and such. It hadn't been too bad up until that time. The score was only 1-0. But these boys scored nine runs in the sixth, and seven more counters in the seventh, and the baseball game just wasn't any more.

There were three runs, runs Charlie Miron getting two, Jimmy Watters one and Larry Holden one. Of two base hits there were a multi-ple. And even Victoria got seven hits.

Lefty Kaye started on the seven for the Firemen, but took a rest after five innings of it. He started for Victoria and got into difficulties, being relieved by Leo Holden. Holden ran five runs tallied off him and did it all in one hour and forty-five minutes.

The short score follows:

Batteries—Cann, Leo Holden, Stuckey and Hayden; Kaye, Ray and Richardson, Goodall.

The Garthway's Rough Trip—The Garthway left Grangemouth, Scotland, on June 12, 1922, headed for the west coast of South America by way of Cape Horn. It did not arrive at Iquique, Chile, its destination, until December 23, 1923. The intervening 519 days, in which the log showed a distance of 21,000 miles, constitute one of the stormiest episodes of the sea ever written. It was replete with hurricanes, sixty-foot-high seas, dangers, hardships, and constantly threatening disaster. The story was published in all leading newspapers during March, 1924.

The Wilson Phalarope—The eggs of Wilson's Phalarope, which is an American bird, are incubated by the male alone. Contrary to the rule pertaining to bird life, the females are larger than the males, more handsomely colored, and more aggressive than their mates.

Bill Terry continued to hit against the Phillies yesterday and improved his lead in the Big Six, while Lou Gehrig and his American League mates were idle. Terry clouted a home run, a double and two singles in five trips to the plate and brought his average up four points to .411. Chuck Klein and Babe Herman, the only other Big Six members to get into action, ended the day in a tie for second place in the National League batting list with .389 averages. Herman dropped a point as he hit once in four times at bat, while Klein gained one with two hits in five trips.

MANN CUP HOLDERS TO BE NAMED TODAY

Salmonbellies Tie Up Lacrosse Series For Dominion Title

Western Champions Defeat Brampton, 5 to 4, in Second Encounter—Deciding Match to Be Played at Toronto Today

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—Having risen to the heights of lacrosse brilliancy in defeating Brampton Excelsiors, 5 to 4, in the second game of the Mann Cup series here yesterday, the Salmonbellies, of New Westminster, have regained the position held by former Western Canada championship teams in the hearts of local enthusiasts of Canada's national pastime.

Beaten and outplayed in the first game last Saturday by so wide a margin that 6,000 fans left Varsity Stadium convinced the trophy, emblematic of the Dominion crown, would remain in the East another year, the Salmonbellies trotted out on the field Monday and astounded another large crowd by spectacular exhibition of lacrosse as has been seen in years.

Not only did the Pacific Coast twelve demonstrate they were a smart, well-drilled squad, but they also proved they possessed more than their share of courage. The fortunes of war shifted allegiance several times, with New Westminster setting the early pace and garnering a two-goal lead, which disappeared in a tie during the second quarter. Then Brampton took the lead early in the third season, and the 1930-31 destiny of the cup and championship appeared settled, especially when the Excelsiors increased their lead to two goals.

SALMONBELLIES RALLY

The Salmonbellies were far from beaten, however, and a thrilling rally started by one of the greatest players in the game, Haddy Stoddard, saw the visitor knot the count with two sparkling goals. Then to climax the hectic contest, Stoddard scored the winning goal early in the final quarter and then dropped back to the home goal guard to save his team from probable defeat by his splendid display of defensive lacrosse.

Tomorrow the teams clash in the third and deciding game with Brampton minus their star home, George Sproule, who wrenched a knee early in the third quarter. The Salmonbellies will be at full strength, although some of the players dropped from exhaustion, and several are badly bruised and somewhat lame.

KRUSE DISQUALIFIED

SEATTLE, Sept. 2.—John Freberg, Swedish heavyweight, won in the seventh round of the main wrestling exhibition here last night, putting Lee Wyckoff, of St. Louis, out with a body heave and slam after a rough show all the way.

Bob Kruse, Portland heavyweight, was disqualified in the fifth and last round of the semi-final against Jacques Manuel, of Portugal. Kruse had been warned by the referee several times for using foul tactics.

Webb, by the way, is a left-hander. It has always been supposed that no left-hander could be a championship golfer, but he may give the lie to the tradition.

The 1930 Central Ohio amateur championship was won by eighteen-year-old George Berry, of Newark. However, the most interesting figure in the tournament was Bob Service, a fifteen-year-old from Dayton. He qualified with a score of eighty, but lost in the match play. A championship consolation being staged, he won easily, taking the final from an older opponent, eight up and seven to go.

Around Dayton they think Service is certain to be a contender in national circles before long.

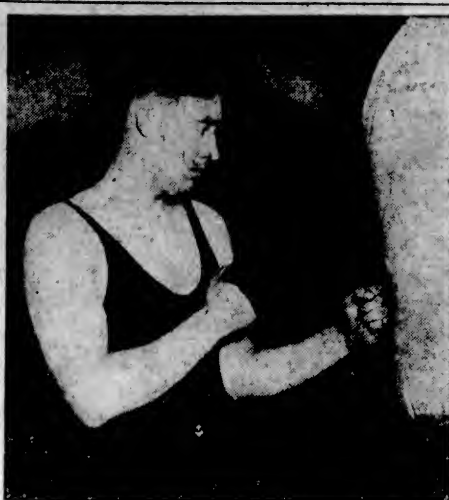

Kentucky also has a fifteen-year-old candidate. He is Tom Hill, of Fort Mitchell, who turned in a seventy-seven in the qualifying round of the state amateur championship, finishing in fourth place.

They come even younger. In the Philadelphia district junior championship, Master Tommy Hyndman, just eight years old, defeated R. Sundheim in the fourteenth eight, two and one. He was the lion of a dinner that followed the tournament and was publicly congratulated by President Robert Strouse, of the Golf Association of Philadelphia.

Tommy plays a neat game and it is going to be neat as he gains strength and muscular co-ordination.

Among other stars developing in the South is Berrien Moore, a seventeen-year-old youth of Atlanta. Young Moore reached the quarter-finals of the recent Southern amateur.

Fifteen-Year-Old Stars Begin to Occupy Limelight in Golf

Boys in Teens Play Important Roles in State and Sectional Events—Probably National Factors of Future

By BAKER

Another five years will witness a metamorphosis in the amateur golfing picture, in the exception that Bobby Jones is likely still to be the focal point around which it will be painted.

It is only a short time since Jess Sweetser, Francis Ouimet, Jesse Guifford and George Von Elm played heavy roles in the amateur golfing picture. But now all of them seem to have passed their prime. In the interim between the past and the future, George Voigt and Don Mac are the only new factors, and which of these two Mac is strictly material for Voigt can be classed as a veteran.

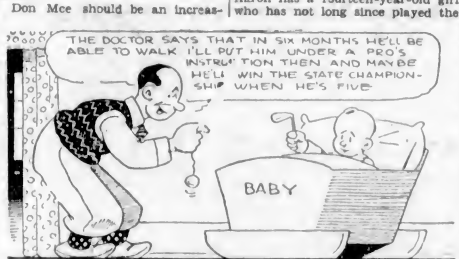

Maurice McCarthy, the Metropolitan star, may figure in national competition from now on, but it is not yet possible to tell to what extent.

Don Mac should be an interesting figure in the future.

tearship at Greensboro. The way in which he did it was reminiscent of his famous fellow townsman, Bobby Jones. He scored an eagle three on the 465-yard eighteenth hole to win his match with Frank Dudley, of Athens, Ga.

Lawrence, Kansas, is hoping for great things from Chester Jones. This nineteen-year-old youth led the qualifiers from several states of the trans-Mississippi section in the national open test. His score of 147 was seven strokes better than that of Harold McSpadden, of Kansas City, generally regarded as the best professional sharp-shooter in this territory.

While youthful males are achieving mightily at the links game, the girls are making progress, too. Oregon's new state champion, Miss Florence Sellers, is only seventeen. Akron has a fourteen-year-old girl who has not long since played the Highland Spring nine-hole course in fifty-two. At Detroit the Girls' Junior Golf Association has just held its tournament in which the entrants ranged all the way from six to eighteen years of age.

The first or baby flight, for girls six to nine years, was won by Janet Limore. She turned in a sixty for six, a record for the event.

The significant feature was that the tournament had thirty-five entries.

The growing interest of women is tremendous. Larry McCool, professional at the old Mission course, Kansas City, decided to offer free instruction every Tuesday morning. His first class found forty-seven young women lined up for a lesson.

Obviously there is going to be more and more fun in golf.

Charge Laid Against C. Hughes of Diverting Wager to His Own Use

Accused of the theft of $150, C. Hughes was remanded in the city police court until Thursday by Magistrate J. H. Henderson. The accused pleaded not guilty and elected to take speedy trial before the magistrate.

Stuart Henderson, who appeared for the accused, asked for the setting of bail, so that the man could be relieved of having to spend the intervening time in the city lockup. The magistrate agreed to this, setting bail at $500 in two sureties.

In outlining the feature of the charge, C. L. Harrison, the city prosecutor, explained that, according to the facts given him, the informant, Robert P. Phillips, had given the accused a cheque for $150 to be placed on a horse at the Willows. The money was to have been wired to New York, however, as it appeared there would be more to be realized on it by so doing. The accused was that Hughes cashed the cheque and did not send it to New York. The money, said Mr. Harrison, was got by a trick.

"FULL TIDE"

By HERBERT GALWAY

(Author of "Mark Burford's Hair," "Miss Nobody," "The Squire of Redebay," Etc.)

CHAPTER XXVIII

Bill Smith, the old chief of the gipsies, was seriously perturbed. He found that Jack Seacum and his daughter were again missing. He knew nothing of where the former had gone, and was superstitiously afraid that his departure after so mysterious an advent meant nothing but evil for the caravan. His unexplained absences were becoming very frequent of late.

His daughter Becky was impulsive and headstrong, and he did not know to what lengths she would go to punish the unreasonable jealousy of Tom Cradley, who was generally accepted as her future husband.

In the ordinary course of events, the old man would not have worried, but it was late at night, and Cradley carefully sewed the seeds of distrust in the old man's mind.

"Haven't I better go and look for Becky, guv'nor?" he inquired, knocking at the door of the van reserved by Smith for his own private use.

"Look for Becky?" he echoed, coming to the head of the little staircase. "Why, where is she?"

"That's what I want to know. There's too much of it. And the new bloke's gone as well."

"Who? Jack?"

"Yes, Seacum—the superior bloke. There was a hardy concealed sneer in Cradley's voice. "I'm going to do them."

The object of his hatred and Rebecca Smith had been out all day endeavoring to find work for the caravan in the way of mat-making, ordinary tinkering and the sale of wooden clothes-pegs. There did not appear to be much profit attached to this form of business, but their living cost practically nothing. The sandhills and countryside usually provided "something for the pot" and other necessities were either begged or obtained at a low price on the ground of poverty.

Bill Smith's money was made at the many fairs he attended. There he usually fitted up cocoanut-shies or some forms of the many games of skill and luck—by which the participant acquired cigars that he dared not smoke, or a trumpery and gaudy "ornament" that shrieked to be destroyed. He did not worry, therefore, at the period of idleness by the coast; the caravan was there only in the course of journeying to more profitable fields.

The inactivity was not without its effect on Tony Ardon. He had leisure to think. There were times when he had agonizing doubts as to his identity. He knew he was not "Jack Seacum," and knew that he was no gipsy. Although his hands had become hard through his work as a fisherman while with Dan Tremarris—and even that recollection was gradually fading—he had a feeling that such work had not always been his.

He thought occasionally that he would see a doctor about his head when near a town of any size, but generally dismissed the idea as one which might conceivably land him in a lunatic asylum.

Pondering over these things, he had strolled away from the camp to sit at his favorite place on the lonely shingle, and endeavor to gather up the threads of his broken memory.

Tom Cradley, as though by right, had arranged in his own mind to take a final walk with Rebecca Smith before the caravan started on its journey to the next fair ground several miles further north.

The girl was aware of this intention, although Cradley had not mentioned it in actual words. Since the arrival of the mysterious stranger she had avoided being alone with the gipsy and tonight she felt she must get away from him at all costs. She would defy him and take the consequences!

The moon was slowly rising over the edge of the waste of water when she slipped quietly from the camp. Like and quick as a panther, she ran across the greenward round which the vans were grouped, and waited. There was nobody else in sight.

She shivered slightly as she hurried past a great clump of pine trees, then ran along the springy turf to the road. She was alone, and she knew it. She was alone, and she knew it. She was alone, and she knew it.

With a murderous snarl he got slowly to his feet, and this time the dagger gleamed wickedly in the moonlight.

Crouching low, he rushed at Tony and aimed a savage blow which would have pierced his heart had not Becky stuck out her foot, and the would-be assassin sprang on the shingle as the knife flew into the air.

Quick as thought he girl picked it up. "If you don't go at once, Tom Cradley," she hissed threateningly, "this knife will send you to your last home."

Muttering a curse, the bully paused for a moment, then turned homeward.

Without a word, Tony and the girl followed.

scouted his prey, he set off after the girl.

He had no difficulty in keeping her in sight, and watched from a safe place as she stood hesitating on the ridge.

When Becky ran down the shingle to the astonished Jack Seacum, Tom Cradley waited for a moment or two, then followed suit. The pebbles rattled like peas in a can as he scrambled down, and the noise of the avalanche of stones made the other two turn quickly in alarm.

Seacum was the first to speak. "Hello, Tom!" he cried. "Come to find me again?"

"You're the last thing I should want to find," he answered. "The guv'nor's sent me."

"What again?"

"But it's not you he's anxious about. It's Becky."

"Tell him he needn't be anxious about Becky," replied Tony quietly. "I've only just seen her."

"I can look after myself, thank you," said the girl coldly, turning to Cradley.

"Very likely, lass, very likely. There's been many like you—very independent, I'm sure."

"But what's the trouble?" asked the so-called Jack Seacum. "If I'm the innocent cause of it all, tell me, and I'll see the guv'nor myself."

"Don't take any notice of him, Jack," cried the girl. "He's the one who goes to father and tries to work him up against you. I know you, Tom Cradley."

"It's a lie!" he hissed. "There's too much of 'this roamin' in the moonlight, an' it's got to be stopped."

"Have you any control over the moonlight, or me, or Becky?" asked the object of his wrath quietly.

"Yes," was the angry reply. "I have. When a stranger that nobody knows comes sneakin' into a peaceful caravan to steal my gel, I have a right—"

"Have I stolen—?" Tony was beginning, when the girl herself interrupted.

"There's no need for Jack to steal me," she laughed hysterically. "I'm a gift to a man like him. As for you—"

Her contemptuous remark was never finished. Like a wild beast from Cradley sprang at the defenceless girl, but before he could reach her as she dodged, the other man had caught him a swinging blow on the chin and he went down like a skittle.

With a murderous snarl he got slowly to his feet, and this time the dagger gleamed wickedly in the moonlight.

Crouching low, he rushed at Tony and aimed a savage blow which would have pierced his heart had not Becky stuck out her foot, and the would-be assassin sprang on the shingle as the knife flew into the air.

Quick as thought he girl picked it up. "If you don't go at once, Tom Cradley," she hissed threateningly, "this knife will send you to your last home."

Muttering a curse, the bully paused for a moment, then turned homeward.

Without a word, Tony and the girl followed.

CHAPTER XXIX

Although Diana Ardon was happy in her employment as governess with the family of Colonel Glastonbury, there were times when she had grave misgivings about her position. She knew she was sailing under false colors as "Miss Ardon," and even if she were a widow—and she was feeling more convinced as the days and weeks went by that such was the case—the position would not be much better so far as her employment was concerned.

The brief encounter with the gipsies had not increased the prestige of Captain Bramber, and he was at great pains to explain his flight.

"It wasn't that I was afraid of them," he said, "but as I had ladies with me the position might have been distinctly embarrassing, and I choose to consider that, in the circumstances, discretion was the better part."

"It was very kind of you to think of me," she smiled, "but really I'm not afraid of gipsies."

Captain Bramber's visits to the home of the Glastonburys were becoming more frequent, and Diana would have been deluging herself with false modesty had she pretended that she was not aware of the reason. But although the Captain was not unattractive, the trend of events made her afraid.

An illiterate note from Dick Medders made her still more unsettled. The former tramp had told her about the journey to Woodgate to follow up the clue of the beard and of the sequel—the policeman calling at Ardon Hall to arrest Ovan, only to find him dead.

The letter had been addressed to her at the local postoffice, and in such a small place as Millwater, where everybody knew everybody else, the postmistress was consumed with curiosity as to the reason for such a secret method of correspondence.

"Why she can't have her letters sent up to the house, beats me," she remarked to one of her old friends who had called at the little office for a stamp and to "pass the time of day."

The visitor shook her head and smiled significantly. "You're not the only one that's been beaten by a pretty face and a sinner," she replied. "It strikes me she's one of the quiet sort—one of the still waters that runs very deep, as the saying is."

"Oh, I don't know about that," said the postmistress, anxious to be fair; "but I must admit it seems a peculiar sort of proceeding for a young lady like she appears to be."

Diana, with that strange intuition that possesses an imported resident in a village, was aware of this local interest in her correspondence, and felt at times that she must leave it all and return to the motherly shelter of Mrs. Stevens.

To add still more to her mental discomfort, Captain Bramber had proposed to her for the third time that morning, and to save herself from further immediate annoyance, she had told him to ask her again.

The girl had a horror of acting too precipitately, and decided on a bold move. She wrote to Dick Medders and asked him to come to Millwater as soon as he could, and arranged a day when she would take the chance of meeting him at the time of the beard.

It was glorious weather when that real lover of open air arrived at Millwater. He could have danced for joy when he at last left the stuffy train, and when he saw Diana waiting for him with a radiant smile on her beautiful face, he wished for one fleeting moment that fate had placed him on the same social level as the girl.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Medders," she smiled. "I'm very glad to see you."

"And I'm glad to see you, miss," he replied diffidently. Diana led the way to the edge of a wood that bordered the road, and, sitting on the stump of an old tree, she waited with an impatience she could scarcely conceal, for the story which might mean so much or so little.

Dick Medders told her of the visit he had paid in company with Beeding to the local constable at Woodgate and how the latter had dictated one of the beads.

"Beeding—is that William who was at the Hall?"

"That's the man, mum—the butler."

Her heart leapt within her. "What does he know?" she panted.

"He knows more than he will say at present, mum," was the reply. "He knows something about a Chinaman called Chang, who, we know for a fact, because we both saw him, called on Jasper—Mr. Smith—at the 'All the other day and—"

"A Chinaman? What on earth—?"

"I don't know, mum, but this 'ere Chang comes from Limeus, and if you remember, that's the place where your 'usband went to when he disappeared."

"And you think Jasper had something to do with that?"

So great was the young wife's agitation that the question was little more than a whisper.

"Well, I don't think Mister Smith sees Chinamen at the 'All because 'e's fond of 'em, and—"

A sob escaped from her as she realized all that it might mean to her, and she placed a tiny gloved hand on Dick Medders' arm.

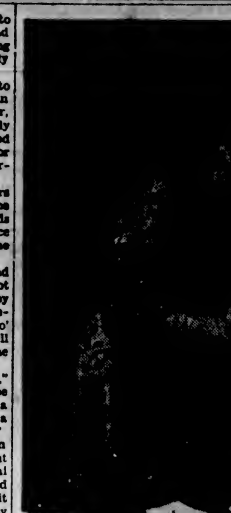

"I must leave here and go back," she said.

Captain Bramber, driving by in a small two-seater, glanced at the agitated girl and the shabbily dressed man—and wondered.

Perhaps, after all, he reflected, the question he was going to put to "Miss" Ardon.

(To Be Continued.)

Sidney Thomas, charged in the Sanich police court yesterday with having assaulted his wife with intent to do grievous bodily harm, was convicted and sentenced to a month in jail.

Friendly...but no friends! ...people can't excuse "B.O."

SHE'S NICE—but let's not invite her! That's what people said about Mrs. ... Everybody knew the reason. Everyone but Mrs. ... herself! Then by chance she overheard, "B.O." "B.O."—the polite term for something people seldom mention...body odour. She was horrified. But that very day she adopted a simple safeguard. Now she is popular, happy, invited everywhere. Never again will she let "B.O." offend!

We don't notice it—in ourselves That's the tragical thing about body odour. The offender is always the last to suspect his fault, because our senses quickly become deadened to an ever-present odour.

Yet everyone perspires. Pores give off a quart of odour-causing waste even on cool days. To play safe—to be sure of not offending—adopt this simple precaution. Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy.

At The Playhouses

CAPITOL Professional jealousy, THEATRE not unknown to the people of stage and screen any more than it is to people in other lines of endeavor, is wholly lacking in the make-up of William Powell. The star of "Street of Chance," "Shadow of the Law" and "For the Defence," the romance showing for last times today at the Capitol Theatre, could rightfully be credited with directing each of his pictures.

PLAYHOUSE Probably you have been whistling "Lillian Kises" lately. "The 3 Sisters," the all-talking Fox Movietone production for which L. Wolfe Gilbert and Abel Baer wrote this popular song hit, is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre. Louise Dresser is co-featured with Tom Patricia, Joyce Compton, June Collier, Kenneth MacKenna and Addie MacPhail, under Paul Sionce's direction.

TRY LETTUCE FOR SLEEPLESSNESS

Many people who are troubled with an inability to sleep have found that by eating a head of lettuce before going to bed they are able to fall into a refreshing normal sleep. This is not a new discovery, for Galen, the great Greek physician, said that he had not found a better remedy than lettuce for wakeful patients. Lettuce has long been known to have a mild soporific effect which produces sleepiness. This soporific effect is caused by two substances, lactucarium and hyoscyamine. These substances are only contained in lettuce and in small quantities, and if the lettuce is taken with an ordinary meal, no effect is noticed, but if a large supply of lettuce is taken by itself, the hypnotic effect of the chemicals will be manifested in a drowsiness shortly after the meal of lettuce.

Many people consider that lettuce is a luxury and not a food, but science has recently found that it is very rich in the important life-sustaining vitamins, and one head of lettuce a day will furnish all of the vitamins that the body requires. Lettuce also contains a large quantity of organic alkaline-forming minerals which form a vital part of the nuclei of the nerve, blood and bone-building cells. Lettuce contains iron, calcium and potassium in large quantities. For this reason, lettuce is a splendid food for neutralizing acids.

Lettuce also has the advantage of supplying to the intestines a soft, bulky cellulose which has the effect of offsetting constipation without irritating the intestines. You should remember to use this salad vegetable at least once a day. Try this combination salad for your next dinner:

Vegetable Salad

Equal amounts of sliced beets, string beans, diced celery and chopped tomatoes. Combine with a little olive oil and serve on shredded lettuce.

Many do not realize that there are a great many ways of using lettuce in a cooked form. Cooked lettuce makes a delicious addition to the evening meal. Here are some recipes for cooking lettuce:

Creamed Lettuce on Melba Toast
Shred a head of lettuce and place it in a pan containing a half cup of boiling water. Cover with a tight-fitting lid and boil slowly for ten minutes. Remove the lid and add a small amount of salt, two tablespoonfuls of cream, and reheat for two minutes over a slow fire with the lid off. Serve on slices of Melba toast with a lump of butter on top.

Lettuce With Other Greens
Mix equal parts of lettuce and mustard, watercress, dandelion and other greens. Simmer in a closely covered pot over a slow fire. Very little or no water is required if stirred occasionally. Lettuce gives the other greens a milder flavor.

Lettuce Stuffed With Green Peas
Cover the bottom of a pan with water, place in it a head of washed lettuce, stem end down. Separate the leaves at the top to form a cavity. Fill this with a cup of canned green peas and add a little salt. Cover the pot tightly and cook over a slow fire fifteen minutes, after which the lettuce will be tender. Serve with drawn butter.

The presence of excessive honor holdings, especially where accompanied by great length of suit, always makes it tempting to try to play the hand with such suit as trump.

The above deal is an example of where North appears to have a game in Hearts, inasmuch as his partner has made a secondary bid of Diamonds, for which he holds exceptional support. If such is the case, then, of course, it is desirable to score 100 for honors as well as the game.

However, when partner makes a second denial of Hearts, the chances for game appear to be much more likely at Diamonds than at Hearts. This being the case, all thought of the honor holding in Hearts should be abandoned, and the bidding should be directed towards arriving at a game bid in Diamonds. It is readily seen that if the above hand were played at Hearts, North must lose one Club, one Spade, one Heart and one Diamond, and be limited to three odd.

ESSENTIAL POINTS OF THE BIDDING
Contract: South (Dealer) passes. He is barely shy of an original bid of Diamonds. As far as his own trick-taking ability is concerned, he is amply able to bid one Diamond, but he has not the support for a take-out or a double or an adverse bid should partner see fit to do either.

West passes and North bids one Heart. Although East's hand looks promising, it does not appear that he would have much to gain either by a bid or an informative double. He accordingly passes and South makes a secondary bid of Two Diamonds. West passes, and North feels that unless South's bid was an absolute denial of the Hearts, there is still a chance for game in that suit. Further, that if the Diamond bid was not an absolute denial, there is a chance for a game in Diamonds should South's bids be at all real. He accordingly bids three Hearts in an effort to make South take further action.

East passing, South reads the bid of three Hearts to be in the nature of a forcing bid towards game. Since he has no Hearts whatever in his hand, he bids four Diamonds, leaving the decision to North as to what should be the final declaration. West passing, North now bids five Diamonds, rather than four Hearts, which concludes the bidding.

THE PLAY
West opens the Jack of Clubs. Dummy wins the trick with the Ace, and Declarer immediately takes two Club discards on the Ace and King of Hearts.

The nature of the hand does not make it imperative for a trump lead to come at present, so that six of Spades is led from Dummy up to South's King. East takes the trick with the Ace and leads the King of Clubs. This South trumps with the four of Diamonds. South now leads the five of Spades and trumps with the two of Diamonds in Dummy.

Since the King and Queen of Diamonds may both be in East's hand, Dummy leads the nine of Diamonds, and when East plays the seven, South plays the five. The trick is taken by the lone King in West's hand, but since the Queen of Diamonds is the only trump outstanding, North and South must make the rest of the tricks.

THE LOTTERY
Everybody knows what a lottery is; most of us, at some time or another have participated in one or another of them. And few institutions have a more interesting beginning and development.

The lottery, as we know it today, originated in Italy, from which country it was afterwards introduced into the rest of Europe, and thence, of course, into the United States and the rest of the world. Like most evil things, the lottery is rooted in politics. And this is how it started.

At Genoa, it was the practice to choose annually by lot, five members of the Senate, which was composed of ninety persons, in order to form a particular committee. As might be expected, there was considerable conjecture and betting as to whom the lots would fall on. This betting assumed such proportions that it was called to the attention of the authorities. Instead of curbing this pernicious indulgence in the way in which the eagerness of the people to gamble an opportunity to capitalize a human frailty, and organized a Governmental lottery, with prizes to be awarded to the lucky ones who bet on the senators chosen.

Subsequently, with the idea of increasing the revenues of the church, we are told that the Pope established a similar lottery at Rome.

The race had just begun when a lady put the field-glasses to her eyes. "I can see the horse we've backed, dear," she remarked to her husband. "What a wonderful horse he must be. They've made him give the others a start!"

Tells Dyspeptics What to Eat
Avoid Gas—Indigestion
Strict diets are often unnecessary in stomach trouble. While some foods do produce excessive acidity and many stomachs do generate "too much acid" causing gas, sourness, bloating and after-eating pains, the trouble may be safely and quickly corrected by the use of a good alkaline. Blurred Magnesia—powder or tablets—is ideal for this purpose. Just a little after meals neutralizes all the excess acid, prevents souring, breaks up gas and ends indigestion. Favorite foods no longer upset stomach and digestion is easy and painless. It will do all this for you or money back. Reliable druggists everywhere sell Blurred Magnesia with this guarantee (adv.)

Business Conditions In Canada Have Definitely Improved

JASPER PARK, Alta., Sept. 2.—Business conditions in Canada have shown definite improvement during the last six weeks. In his address here today at the opening meeting of the annual convention of the Sun Life Assurance Company, W. S. Penny, of Montreal, superintendent of Canadian agencies, indicated that the returns of the company over that period were noticeably more favorable.

Three hundred Canadian representatives of the Sun Life, including President T. B. Macaulay, have already arrived at Jasper Park Lodge by special trains from the East and the West. They will hold business sessions for three days and will be followed by the American delegation on September 8. It is expected that a total of 900 will be in attendance at stock conventions.

STOCK MARKET OPINIONS

(Branan, Brown & Co., Ltd.)

J. S. Bache & Company—It is interesting to note that whereas sharp declines in specialties brought accompanying reactions in the highest grade issues, several months ago, during the past two weeks breaks in specialties have virtually been ignored by better grade issues. This, in connection with the existing technical position and slowly improving business conditions, would seem to permit the inference that the major trend of securities is now upward.

CANNING INDUSTRY IN STRONG POSITION

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—On the basis of data so far available, 1930 will be close to a normal year for the can-making industry. O. C. Huffman, president of the Continental Can Company, said before sailing for England for a brief vacation. He added that because of the constant increase in consumption, during the past five years, the carryover of canned fruits and vegetables probably will "be cleaned up" so well that the industry should go into 1931 in a very strong position.

WOOD RETAINS SPEED HONORS

Veteran American Defeats Betty Carstairs' Boats In Second Heat

ENGLISH GIRL THROUGH

DETROIT, Sept. 2.—Gar Wood, the silver-haired pilot, is speedboat champion of the world for at least another year.

His Miss America defeated the best British had to offer in the Harnsworth Trophy race and in the second and final heat yesterday two of them—Miss America IX, driven by Wood, and Miss America VIII, driven by his brother George—bettered the record for a thirty-mile heat.

The Miss America IX averaged 77.390 miles an hour yesterday, compared with the former record of 75.287 made by Gar Wood in the Miss America VIII last year. The Miss America, VIII averaged 77.233 yesterday and turned in the fastest lap at 79.785.

Miss Marion Barbara Carstairs must return to England without the trophy although she has spent about $50,000 effort to win it. This was her third attempt to lift the trophy held by Wood since he won it at the Isle of Wight in 1927. Miss Carstairs has the distinction of being the first challenger ever to finish a heat in a Harnsworth Trophy race against Wood's hydroplanes.

The Tzouhalem Cup was captured by R. F. Blandy's Boykin, while the Cowichan Dinghy Trophy went to Humphrey Golby when he skippered his sailing dinghy Tern past the finishing line in first position.

The regatta was a success from every angle and the officials of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, who directed affairs, are to be congratulated on the way they carried out the various races. Close to thirty sail boats and twenty-five power boats competed and the results follow:

Stewart Wins Moody Cup by Great Finish

Flashing past the judges at a terrific pace, Don Stewart, Victoria, captured the Dr. T. Glendon Moody Cup race over the fifteen-mile route on Labor Day at the Beacon Hill Park. Although Stewart's time for the distance is far from any record, it was two minutes faster than last year when Jim Davies won it.

Right on Stewart's heels came Glen Robbins, while only a few feet behind him came Jerry Ward, both of Victoria. Ward won the special lap prize by passing the stand in first place seven times and also received a prize for lap points.

ROADSIDE FIRES CAUSE TROUBLE

Live Tobacco Ashes Thrown From Cars Start Even Hundred Blazes

MINORITY ARE CARELESS

Sudden increases in the number of roadside fires reported along British Columbia thoroughfares led to a special warning, issued by officials of the Forest Protection Service yesterday, against jettisoning cigarettes and cigar butts, and live pipe ashes from automobiles.

Lending force to the warning, on a typical stretch of the Island Highway from Victoria to Colwood, no less than 100 roadside fires have occurred this season, with their tell-tale marks remaining as a caution against repetition of a dangerous practice.

Officials of the forest protection branch over Labor Day holiday counted a number of examples of the roadside fire nuisance, witnessing both the throwing away of cigarette and cigar butts, and the subsequent fires that followed. In all cases car numbers were noted, and a polite letter will go forward to the owners of the vehicles, asking for co-operation with the forest protection branch in reducing the number and damage from fires this season.

Officials of the branch explain that generally throughout the province extremely dry conditions prevail, and that the second high peak customary in the season is to be expected within the next few weeks. Motorists and their parties can help check the outbreaks of preventable fires by making sure that nothing burning is thrown out by the roadside.

B. BRYAN COMES FROM NEW YORK TO GO FISHING

Multimillionaire Head of Brokerage Firm is on Annual Visit
THINKS BUSINESS NOW IS ON UPWARD GRADE

Lured by memories of former joys at Campbell River, Ben Bryan, head of the transcontinental and international brokerage firm of Logan & Bryan, and incidentally a multimillionaire, was in the city on Monday, together with Mrs. Bryan, on their way to the famous salmon fishing stream. They were accompanied by Mr. Bryan's physician, Dr. Taylor, and by Mrs. Bryan's medical traveling companion, J. Forbes McBurney, of Seattle, one of the firm's Pacific Coast partners, joined Mr. Bryan here and the party was welcomed by C. L. H. Branson, representative of the Logan & Bryan interests in Victoria.

Mr. Bryan was wearing the copper button of the Tye Club which he won two years ago by taking a tame thirty-two pound salmon from Campbell River. He regards it as his most cherished honor and is ambitious this year to land a forty-pounder and win the silver button of the club. There was a busy scene while the equipment was being transferred into motor cars for the trip north.

A BUSY DAY
While it is the big fish that Mr. Bryan is after and to which he wishes to devote his thoughts for the next ten days, he was unable to escape from business.

Although it was Labor Day the firm's leased telegraph wires to New York were held open while he conferred with his partners and assistants there and in response to inquiries he made the following statement on the business situation:

BUSINESS OUTLOOK
"Indications seem to be more nearly defined than general business has turned out to be. Improvement is noticeable in the steel industry, and with the various crops being marketed the buying power in a large portion of the agricultural section should make itself felt in various lines of endeavor. Stock market prices in a great many instances have not recovered materially from the low levels of a while ago. Liquidation seems to have dried up and the market in many sections is super-sensitive to small buying orders. I feel as though the next movement of importance in the stock market will be upward and accordingly suggest that it may be the better part of wisdom to indulge in buying opportunities at this time."

would require workmen to learn a new system of measurements, and particularly in the case of the metric system, it would necessitate the learning of the English system of measurement and then calculate deductions from that system.

WOULD WASTE TIME
"This revolution of methods would cause endless confusion and considerable waste of time," it is contended by those in authority in the different countries that I visited.

"I was also informed that similar conditions exist in South America. Officials who have been studying the problems of world supply and demand of commodities for years cannot understand how it is that with the enormous stands of timber on the Pacific Coast some mills have not been fitted out to cut for the metric measurement trade."

One tangible result of Mr. Raymer's visit, and the interest that Premier Tolmie and his cabinet have been taking in establishing cordial relations with maritime countries throughout the world with a view to extending British Columbia's commerce, will shortly be made available to the fishing industry of the province. This is no less than the formula used on the Dalmanet littoral for the curing of fish. This process, it is claimed, has no superior, and will permit of fish being preserved in a fresh state for a year.

COURTESY APPRECIATED
"This most valuable concession," stated Mr. Raymer, "comes as a direct result of the interest being shown by Premier Tolmie and his cabinet in establishing contacts throughout the world for British Columbia. The efforts of the Premier in this respect are particularly appreciated by the Government of Yugoslavia, which is also grateful for the freedom and advantages enjoyed by the nationals of Yugoslavia in this province.

"The process of curing fish has been a carefully maintained formula since its adoption a few years ago, but as an expression of goodwill to British Columbia will be revealed for use in this province."

"The courteous gesture of Premier Tolmie last Spring, upon hearing that His Majesty King Alexander I was interested in the big game of British Columbia, in sending forward, for His Majesty's private collection, three selected trophies of the province's game struck a responsive chord. Not only was the King most highly pleased at the compliment, but the Government as a whole was delighted at the friendliness of the action."

"In the troubled state of affairs in Europe such a spontaneous courtesy means a great deal, and the Premier's donation to the royal collection was made the subject of special mention in the court gazette."

PROVINCE WELL KNOWN
"It is noteworthy that of all the Canadian provinces, British Columbia is better known in Yugoslavia than is any other of the separate sections of the Dominion."

"This country, which in geographical features and industrial occupations resembles British Columbia perhaps more than does any other part of Europe, would like to trade extensively with the Canadian Pacific coast. At the present time the exchange limits the opportunity of great trade development, as it does with several other European countries, but some commerce might be built up, and certainly the fact which the British Columbia Government has been establishing will result favorably to this province when exchange conditions resume more of their pre-war parity.

"Jugoslavia produces nuts, oils, dried fruits, carpets, wines and mineral waters that at present Canada purchases elsewhere. If accorded a commercial treaty similar to arrangements made with several other European nations, Yugoslavia would be a probable purchaser of British Columbia fish meal and fertilizers, canned fruits, wool, pulp and lumber, provided that the latter was cut to metric measurement."

WANTS TRADE COMMISSIONER
Czechoslovakia, stated Mr. Raymer, who spent some time there enquiring into trade conditions, already enjoys a commercial treaty with that little country, which produces a great volume of manufactured products for world consumption, is somewhat piqued at the fact that it does not have a resident Canadian Trade Commissioner. The commissioner with jurisdiction over Czechoslovakia is resident in Hamburg.

Similar objections to utilizing British Columbia lumber apply here, Mr. Raymer said. A trade might be developed from British Columbia to several of the European countries, he said, in spruce pulp for the manufacture of artificial silk. This market possibility should, in his opinion, be more extensively investigated.

Italy has advanced tremendously as a factor in the commerce of the world, Mr. Raymer found. Premier Mussolini has adopted a policy that limits the importation of luxuries, while only necessities, and particularly essential food supplies and raw materials, are bought. This has resulted in the development of Italian industries, for luxuries are made for export trade to countries in which necessities are bought. Italy has largely superseded France as the supplier of olive oil. The imports of foodstuffs, particularly of non-perishables, have increased, and causing suspicion in some of Italy's neighbors, who fear Italian aggression in the future.

LUMBER POSSIBILITY
Holland is more or less in a prosperous state, drawing most of her supplies that are not produced at home from her colonies. There is a possibility of an increase in the shipping of lumber to British Columbia. In return for this, Holland would like to see her sales of flower bulbs increased.

"Austria is financing on borrowed money and is therefore more or less restricted in her purchasing to the countries to which she is indebted."

"Germany is working real hard to reconstruct her industrial fabric. Her energies are being concentrated upon a methodical endeavor to achieve supremacy in the trade rather than the military field. There is a section, Germany, however, that can neither forget nor forgive the defeat of the Fatherland, and would like to see, once more, the dominion of the military class. Whether, in time, they will succeed in their ambition only time, of course, will disclose. But there is no hesitation on the part of older generation, which went through the bitterness of the war period, to declare that they are seeking to dominate the field of commerce."

GAME EXHIBIT SUCCESS
The exhibit of British Columbia big game heads sent to Leipzig by the British Columbia Government, in collaboration with G. L. Pop, of Vancouver, made a most distinct and favorable impression. The excellence of this display drew attention to it not only from within Germany, but throughout Europe. It should result in a large number of European sportsmen visiting British Columbia within the next two or three years. Big game is almost the thing of the past in European forests. What remains of the former abundant species of game is small and thin. In comparison with native wild life the magnificent antlered caribou, elk, deer and mountain goat from British Columbia, and the immense and fearsome bear heads displayed at the Leipzig exhibition have come all the more desirable as objectives of the thousands of sportsmen who visited the display."

In addition to his surveying of trade possibilities for the Government, Mr. Raymer carried with him 150 slides of British Columbia views, and gave a number of lectures upon investment possibilities and tourist attractions of this province. These lectures proved most popular. Especially was this so that at one lecture, given on board the ship crossing the Atlantic, he obtained pledges from no less than fifty-two persons, mostly wealthy Americans, that they would visit British Columbia next year.

INTEREST IN KEEN
Everywhere he found interest in this province, and many persons waited for him after his lectures to further question him as to conditions here. Great surprise was expressed at his description of the wealth of resources contained within the province and of its temperate climate.

"What you are picturing to us," exclaimed one man, "is the promised land."

"Quite true," responded Mr. Ray-mer, "it is indeed the land of promise; come and see it for yourself and invest in its opportunities."

Mr. Raymer found that until exchange conditions became more normal Canada can not look for any great development of tourist trade from among the people of moderate means, although some of the wealthy may be induced to visit the Dominion, and many sportsmen of means will undoubtedly come to seek big game trophies in British Columbia.

ATHLETIC ASSEMBLY
While in Yugoslavia Mr. Raymer attended the assembly of the Sokob, the great athletic organization of which he has been a member for the past thirty-five years. He participated in the march of the 45,000 men and women who had assembled from all parts of the world at Belgrade for the event, and carried the Canadian ensign. Mr. and Mrs. Raymer were the only Canadians who participated, and the fact that they had with them the Canadian ensign brought applause from all quarters. They were the guests of the British Ambassador at luncheon in their honor on Dominion Day, and the Canadian flag was displayed while they were at the Embassy.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL SAYS ACTION UP TO VANCOUVER POLICE

Fry, no miniature golf course now in operation open on Sunday, so that a test of the issue is not anticipated here.

OFFICIAL ATTITUDE
Explaining failure of the Vancouver Police Board to proceed with prosecutions, Vancouver officers have reported to the Attorney-General's Department that a review of the whole issue raised the question of policy as to whether the closing of the Illupian courses might not lead to more objectionable forms of recreation than outdoor amusement now participated in by their patrons.

The decision to prosecute or not to prosecute is being left to municipal administrations, but flats will be issued by his department if requested for reasonable cause, Mr. Foley made it plain.

PARK OPERATED
VANCOUVER, Sept. 2.—Action in the recent Sunday operation of Happyland Amusements at Hastings Park now rests with the Attorney-General, Inspector George Hood, chief of the police commission, formed the town planning and parks committee today.

Members of the police force visited the park Sunday, purchased tickets, secured names and forwarded evidence to the Attorney-General's Department at Victoria to take action under the Lord's Day Act, Inspector Hood said.

Separate action will be taken by the City Council on motion of Alderman R. N. Fraser, who moved that the Sunday operation of Happyland be brought to the attention of the police commission. Charles Jones, licence inspector, will also be instructed to report on what restrictive measures are enforceable by the city in respect to the civil licence issued to the amusement park.

RESIDENTS OBJECT
Residents in the vicinity object strongly to Sunday operation of the amusement device, Alderman H. J. Degrafs declared. They protest against the noise of the various devices on the Sabbath, he said.

J. K. Matheson, manager of the Vancouver Exhibition, appeared before the committee and explained that the exhibition association is opposed to Sunday operation of the amusement park. Walter Leek, president of the association, Mr. Matheson said, stated it was against the wishes of the exhibition board and the matter would be discussed at tomorrow's meeting of the association.

Inspector Hood explained that he had warned the management of Happyland on Saturday that action would be taken if the park was operated on Sunday. He then sent officers out to purchase tickets and secure names of operators when the management opened Sunday and has forwarded this information to Victoria.

CASE IS STATED
In announcing that it would operate all its devices on Sunday, the management of Happyland took the stand that other forms of amusement and entertainment are available to the public on the Sabbath.

"If other forms of amusement are open to the public Sunday," declared C. H. Carter, managing-director of Happyland, "we can see no reason why we should not operate also. Miniature golf courses are permitted to operate. It is possible to take excursions and hire boats for pleasure Sunday, and we see no harm in the public taking rides on the giant dipper or any other of our amusement devices."

It was the first Sunday in the history of the park that Happyland has been open to the public.

present a composite set of recommendations.

A reduction of 55 cents per 100 pounds on Okanagan apples shipped westward for export and the overseas trade, and a much larger reduction implied by the new rate of 24 1/2 cents per 100 pounds for Kootenay growers, who were formerly at a great disadvantage, have been definitely promised. The existing rate from the Okanagan is 49 cents, and from the Kootenay area in the neighborhood of 65 cents per 100 pounds. Both rates will be equalized at 24 1/2 cents.

Premier Tolmie negotiated with the reductions, and officials of the Government will follow up the issue by reasonable requests for further detailed concessions to assist British Columbia growers.

AMERICAN PUBLISHER EXPELLED BY FRANCE

Publication by W. R. Hearst of Secret Document Leads to Action By French Government

PARIS, Sept. 2.—French officials announced today that William Randolph Hearst, American publisher, had been expelled from France because one of his agents obtained and published a secret document relative to Franco-British naval negotiations in 1928.

Hearst arrived in Paris yesterday for his first visit since publication of the document. Agents of the Government called on him and requested him to leave without waiting for the period of grace to expire. The Ministry of the Interior gave out the following statement late today:

"William Randolph Hearst, proprietor of numerous American newspapers, has been expelled from French territory. This measure, taken upon order of the President of the Council, Minister of the Interior, had origin in the role played by Hearst in the publication of a secret document relative to the Franco-British naval negotiations. The Surete Generale, the French equivalent of Scotland Yard, which conveyed the expulsion order to Mr. Hearst, had previously stated that the document was taken because of Hearst's generally 'hostile attitude toward France.'"

SERGEANT'S REPORT
Another version of the shooting was obtained from Sergeant Renton, Manitoba Provincial Police. He reported that Constable Pirt was "a little the worse for liquor" and was showing his gun to Mrs. Light. Some people nearby interfered, believing that a fireman should not be displayed by the officer. An attempt was made to take the gun from Constable Pirt, and in the scuffle the gun was fired.

Constable Pirt joined the R.C.M.P. about a year ago and six months ago was sent to detachment duty at Yorkton. Information obtained from the headquarters was to the effect that the officer bore a splendid record. Pirt came from England and is a Great War veteran.

PREMIER BRACKEN NEARBY
The shooting occurred close to the speaker's platform, Premier Bracken himself being but a few yards away when the shot was fired.

Mrs. Light was immediately placed in an automobile and a mad race for the hospital followed the affray. At this time the car was driven across the plain at seventy miles an hour and when halfway to Dauphin it could no longer stand the strain. One

REPUTED LARGEST PRAYER MEETING

FIRST CASE IN FORCE
OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—If early reports on the shooting of a woman yesterday at Dauphin, Man., by a Royal Canadian Mounted Police constable, J. Pirt, are borne out by investigation, it is the first incident in the history of the force to mar its reputation, Colonel C. Starnie, R.C.M.P. commissioner, said here today.

Members of the R.C.M.P. are governed by the Criminal Code as to when they may use firearms. The same as civil police officers, Colonel Starnie explained, and Constable Pirt will stand trial in the courts if the shooting is found to be without justification.

The records here show that Constable Pirt joined the force at Van-

Said to be the largest prayer meeting in the world is the midweek intercessory service that has been held since 1923 in Sydney, Australia. The meetings are held from 12:30 to 3:30 o'clock, and those who attend are free to come and go at times convenient to them. Under this arrangement a single day's meeting will probably consist of three or four separate congregations. Thanksgivings are presented at every gathering and requests for prayer are read. The meeting is interdenominational and the seven uninterrupted years of ministry, according to The Australia Christian World, have proved a rich blessing.

For some months there has been a good demand for bonds, with the natural result that prices have advanced and yields have been reduced. There is every indication that the demand will continue and the results be accentuated. Presently some of those who are looking for safe investments may begin to compare the yield from government bonds with that from revenue earning real estate, or at least from properties offered at attractive prices.

Wheat is being marketed in record volume in the prairie provinces. The C.P.R. reports 3,750,000 bushels marketed on Saturday along its lines, and the C.N.R. 3,230,000 bushels. There are 9,213,000 bushels in storage at Vancouver. Total deliveries at prairie points during the market holiday were more than ten million bushels. Heavy hedging sales by elevator companies had their effect on the market, and October wheat went down to 84 5/8 cents, the lowest for this season.

In the installation of new machinery at its sugar refinery at Edmonton, Alberta, Canadian Sugar Factories, Limited, is preparing to cope with the greatest crop of sugar beets yet harvested in Alberta. It is estimated that the crop will exceed 100,000 tons, or 40 per cent more than last year and more than double the crop of any previous year. The objective set for this season was 80,000 tons when the campaign was on for increased acreage in the spring.

International Hydro-Electric System, a division of International Paper & Power Company, produced 333,386,000 kilowatt hours of electricity in July, a new high record for that month, and an increase of 12 per cent over the output of the present plants of the system in July, 1929. The output of the system in the first seven months of this year was 2,368,352,000 kilowatt hours, 11 per cent greater than in the first seven months of last year, and 59 per cent greater than the output of the present plants of the system in the first seven months of 1928. In the twelve months ended July 31, 1929, the combined output of electric energy of all central station power plants in the United States and Canada in the first six months of this year—the latest figures available—increased 2 per cent over their output in the first six months of last year.

The Saint John Drydock & Shipbuilding Company, Limited, is constructing 500 tons of steel trusses for bridges in New Brunswick. Distribution of $135 a share to the preferred stockholders of the City Dairy Company, Limited, will place close to a million dollars in the hands of Canadians for reinvestment. Ownership of the preferred of this company is vested in the hands of a large number of people across the Dominion, and with this capital being returned in a lump sum, investors will have to seek another channel for the investment of their funds. The capital return is being made at a time when there is an active demand for bonds and at a time when the dividend return for well-seasoned Canadian stocks is more liberal than for years past.

SUBURBAN HEIGHTS--CARRYING OUT A CHAIR

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

INHALES POISON GAS

That Professor J. S. Haldane, well-known Oxford scientist, had tested the effects of carbon monoxide poisoning by shutting himself in a steel chamber with a companion and inhaled the deadly fumes, has just been revealed by The British Medical Journal. The test took place in London. When a saturation of 30 or 40 per cent was reached, he states, certain mental symptoms began to appear, and became more prominent with increasing volume. One of those symptoms was impaired memory for the most recent happenings. The pressure in the chamber corresponded to that found at 25,000 feet above sea level. Of one hour of this experiment he had not the slightest memory afterwards, although, according to his companion, who was less affected than himself, talking all the time and answering questions.

MUSIC SOOTHES BRIGANDS

How music soothed Chinese Communist brigands is told in letters recently received in Glasgow, Scotland, from Mr. and Mrs. R. Porteous, Scotch missionaries in China. The couple were captured on the road to Anson, and were held for $20,000 ransom each, but finally were released. Porteous wrote that for three days after their capture they had abuse heaped upon them. Their meek attitude seemed to impress the brigands, who gave Porteous an old damaged concertina to repair. He tried it with a string and "squeezed" some music out of it. Later, he and Mrs. Porteous sang some songs in English for the captors, after which the brigands became friendly, treated them with utmost consideration, and spared them their lives would be spared.

COLUMBIA DIOCESE DELEGATES LEAVE

Clerical and Lay Representatives to Attend Church of England
Meeting at Ottawa

Archdeacon Laycock and F. W. Blankenbach, as the clerical and lay representatives of the diocese of Columbia, leave today to attend the annual meeting of the general boards of the Church of England in Canada, which meet in Ottawa on September 15. These boards are composed of representatives of the dioceses of the national church and deal with missions, religious education, social welfare and other matters.

As the bishops who have been in attendance at the recent conference at Lambeth Palace will be present at the Ottawa gathering, it is expected that the encyclical letter that has been issued from Lambeth will come under consideration and some action taken upon the resolutions that were passed. While the church as a whole, it is said, can not take official action until the meeting of its general synod, which is dated for September, 1931, it is understood that the house of bishops and the executive council of the synod will take cognizance of the recommendations made at the ecumenical gathering in London. These recommendations will also be brought before the various diocesan synods preliminary to their disposal at the national synod. The diocesan synod of the diocese of Columbia holds its annual meeting in the month of February of each year.

What Today Means

If September 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 10:30 a.m., from 5 to 6 p.m. and from 11 p.m. to midnight. The danger periods are from noon to 1 p.m. and from 8 to 9:30 p.m. Upsetting influences are predicted for this date, and a series of mistakes are liable to be made. Fight against being led into cleverly-concocted traps by unscrupulous friends. Neither seek nor listen to advice. Be careful of all investments, and search for snares in legal papers. The child born on this September 3 will have well-developed critical faculties—neatness, precision and carefulness. It will have a love for intellectual pursuits in general, but it will somewhat lack initiative, activity and hopefulness. The world is prejudiced in your favor because of your many Puck-like qualities. You hide the serious side of your nature, your determination to win, by your light-hearted demonstrations over the ups and downs of the game of life. You improve upon the four qualities of the struggles in which you engage, by getting a laugh or two out of them. No matter how fierce, how perturbed, how ill you may feel inside, your exterior expressions are usually in a light and cheerful nature or tone. You are quite alone in your heartaches, for you hide them too deeply for the world to know of them, or to sympathize with you. It is always ready, however, to romp with you, and that is what is expected of one of your temperament. Some people are born punctual, but you were not, and will never achieve that state. Time means absolutely nothing to you, and you are invariably late for business or luncheon appointments. You are not deliberately discourteous, but your "no-idea-of-time" complex is not always accepted with good humor by your waiting friends. The charm of your personality, your own good nature and clever alibi, usually get you pardoned for most of your sins. You are not a tidy worker, but you have both ingenuity and originality. You are a splendid co-partner in any job, for you are hopeful and of such good cheer, and never seem to fatigue. Cupid will wound your heart many times.

Dublin Surgeon Will Be Here Three Days

SIR ROBERT WOODS, F.R.C.S.I.

LOUBATIE EXTENDS IDEA

Enthusiased over his successful results in giving patients iodine in oysters, Dr. Rene Loubatie, of Bordeaux, France, declares that the idea can be used with all unpleasant medicines. Dr. Loubatie announced his oyster iodine plan a few months ago, and since then has been experimenting with other chemicals. He is using them in much the same way, which is to perform a surgical operation on the bivalves, immerse them in iodine until they have absorbed a quantity, then give them a sterilizing bath. The patient eats the oysters in the regular way and thus gets more iodine than if taken merely as a medicine. The doctor argues that those who take medicine unpleasant to them do not get the full benefit because the stomach rebels.
